Part II: Nutrient Management Proposals Challenge Farming

(This is the second installment in a report on proposed changes to national rules to protect the nation's water supplies through the Clean Water Act, and the issues and programs in Pennsylvania that may be affected by those proposals.)

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The ability for any farmer to spread animal manure on his land is at risk, according to reports presented last week to the Pennsylvania State Conservation Commission Nutrient Management Advisory Board at a regular meeting in Harrisburg, and summaries of information available from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

The threat to traditional and even modern agricultural land applications of animal manure is coming from the Clinton Administration as a reaction to three things: the phenomenon of integrated, high-density livestock production in the United States; a guessed connection between excessive soil and water phosphorus levels and a potentially dangerous, brackish water organism, pfisteria piscicida; and the belief that the highly visible agricultural sector is an uncontrolled and major contributor to long standing national problems with water quality.

Last week's report on the presentations to the Pennsylvania State Conservation Commission's Nutrient Management Advisory

Susquehanna County Dairy Day Draws More Than 800

ELK LAKE (Susquehanna Co.) — Both exhibitors and farmers agree that attending Susquehanna County Dairy Day is a positive experience and that positive feeling is reflected in the number of farmers and agribusiness people the event draws.

Nick Place, county extension director and agricultural agent with the Susquehanna Cooperative Extension Service, estimates that more than 800 farmers and agribusiness people attended the annual Susquehanna County Dairy Day held at Elk Lake High School recently.

He attributes much of their success to the fact that it is a group effort.

"It's a committee effort," said Place. "The committee puts a lot of work into it and a lot of effort. Ownership of Dairy Day goes to the committee."

Maryland Holstein Convention Held In Timonium

KAREN BUTLER
Maryland Correspondent

TIMONIUM, Md. – The Upper Chesapeake Holstein Club hosted this year's annual Maryland Holstein meeting and banquet. The meeting, held at the state fairgrounds in Timonium, marked a change in format from previous years, when the meeting was held in conjunction with the state sale. This year the sale will be held the evening of April 9 at the fairgrounds.

Keynote speaker at the meeting was Dr. David Kohl, professor of agricultural finance and small business management and entrepreneurship at Virginia Tech. Dr. Kohl talked on megatrends in agriculture and family business transitions. He addressed the current state

HALIFAX (Dauphin Co.) — Steep hills. Easily erodible land.

Those two elements can work heartache into any conservation plan.

Often, great steps need to be taken — terracing, waterways, contour cropping — to ensure soil doesn't end up down river.

But Dauphin County conservation farmer David Woland was sold on another idea years ago.

No-till.

That simple practice of seeding and maintaining crops without cultivation has worked wonders on soil conservation on farmland that he rents and as custom operator for several other farms in the Halifax and Enders regions of Dauphin County.

For his work as a salesman for no-till and conservation practices in the area, the Dauphin County

Early this week before the low pressure weather systems moved into the area from the west, farmers were busy getting a head start on spring work. Hauling manure and spreading lime and fertilizer were common operations in the fields. The cool weather has slowed pasture growth but the open winter helped bring on early rye pastures. In the photo, Paul Zimmerman spreads fertilizer in Isaiah Millers' fields located along Forest Hill Road south of Brownstown off Route 772 in Lancaster County. The photographer caught up with this spreading operation late Tuesday afternoon just before the clouds completly covered the sun for the rest of the week. Photo by Everett Newswanger, managing editor.

Modern, efficient mills in Hagerstown, Md. and Gettysburg, Pa. assure your access to consistent quality, freshness and competitive pricing. Southern States also offers financial and management services, including flock record keeping and service, egg and spent fowl marketing, forward planning, market forecasting, flexible credit terms, and more.

Depend on the knowledge, service and solutions of Southern States. Call Mike Royal, Manager of Commercial Feed Accounts, today at (804) 281-1261 for more details on the pullet and layer feeds, as well as services, that will give you an egg up on production...and profits.

USDA-MO Dept. Ag Market News

DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

Grain and soybean bids were higher earlier today but wheat and beans closed slightly lower and corn mostly steady. Light overnight export demand for corn and soybeans limited declines for beans and kept corn bids steady. Some profit taking was noted on the board for wheat and soybeans and favorable growing weather for winter wheat areas offered weakness. Soybean bids were also lower due to declines in soybean meal bids. Wheat 3 to 5 cents lower. Corn steady to 1 cent higher. Sorghum steady to 1 cent higher. Soybeans 1 to 2 cents lower.

In the dairy business, income over feed cost is the name of the game Pro-Lix liquid feed supplements offer dairymen the means to maximize this value while getting the most from their cow's natural abilities

Pro-Lix liquid feed supplements are concentrated sources of just what ordinary feeds lack protein, energy, vitamins, minerals -- everything animals need for economical milk production and growth

For replacement heifers, Pro-Lix means faster maturity and assurance that they'll get to the milking herd on time If you trust your heifers to forage alone, they might not make it (Bouvatec Is Available)

For lactating cows, the nitrogen content of Pro-Lix means plenty of protein available for milk production and growth

Finally, for dry cows, Pro-Lix not only helps maintain their health during the dry period it prepares them for the next lactation The Ca P ratio in Pro-Lix helps control milk fever, while the Vitamin E and selenium aids in clean-up after the birth of a calf

Best of all, Pro-Lix works with all types of pasture grass or forage, as a free-choice supplement, a top-dressing, or a ration mix

The payoff is healthier animals and economical production, all year round!

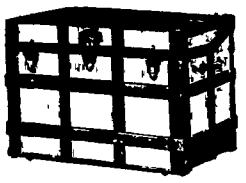
The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

MARCH 23-29, 1998

ANNUNCIATION, MARCH 25.

WHO, HOUDINI?

Harry Houdini, otherwise known to his mother as Ehrich Weiss, was born on March 24, 1874. Psychoanalysts have speculated that Houdini's obsession with his mother may have been a motivating factor in his becoming the world's foremost escape artist. The theory is that the dark, enclosed spaces — including the embalmed carcass of a "sea monster" found near Boston, which Houdini entered in handcuffs and then escaped, despite chains — were symbolic reenactments of the birthing process. Houdini took his stage name from the French magician Robert Houdin Houdini died on Halloween, October 31, 1926, which became National Magic Day in the United States in his honor.



The escaped mouse ever feels the taste of the bait.

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Sterilize toothbrushes in the dishwasher, or soak them in mouthwash.

QUICK LEMON PARFAIT

2 cups heavy cream
1 cup sugar
grated rind and juice of 3 lemons
fresh mint or berries, for garnish (optional)

Whip cream and sugar. Fold in lemon juice and rind Fill 12 muffin cups with the lemon cream and cover with plastic wrap. Freeze about 1 hour, or until firm To serve, top with sprigs of mint, or sprinkle with the fresh berries

Makes 12 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

March dust and May sun makes corn white and maids dun.

A peck of March dust and a shower in May makes the corn green and the fields gay.

When the Sun sets bright and clear, an easterly wind you need not fear.

OPINION

Celebrate National Agriculture Week

Farmers and ranchers represent less than two percent of the United States population so why should the rest of us want to celebrate National Agriculture Week, March 15-21? Actually, a better question should be "Why wouldn't we want to celebrate it?"

After all, the efficiency and strong work ethic of America's farmers and ranchers means we spend a lot less for food in this country. While we spend 11.4% of our personal income on food. Japan spends 21%, Italy spends 26%, and China spends 53%. Just imagine if you had to allocate more than half your income to food.

Another reason we should celebrate is the contribution agriculture makes to the U.S. balance of trade. Agriculture is America's #1 exporter, hitting record highs in sales overseas and reaching more foreign markets than ever before.

Certainly those are good reasons for us to feel good about American agriculture but this year's National Agricultural Week theme is "Growing Tomorrows." How is American agriculture addressing tomorrow?

According to H.D. Cleberg, president, Farmland Industries, Inc., World population is expected to reach 7.9 billion by the year 2020 and about 10 billion by the end of the next century. In addition, many of the 5.5 billion people who currently populate the world will be coming into new wealth. We'll not only be feeding new mouths, but we'll also be feeding those who can afford to improve their diets.

Today's farmer is meeting the challenges of world needs now and in the future with progressive tools like precision farming and biotechnology.

Through precision farming, producers can precisely control the amount of crop protection products they put on their fields, which helps them to achieve the greatest output per acre, per amount of input.

Through sophisticated satellite technology farmers can man a field and log data on everything from soil conditions to weed density. With that data, which is fed into an electron grid of their field, they can determine the exact amount of chemical that needs to be applied in any specific cropping location.

In the process, both of these approaches allow the farmer to put less stress on the environment

Biogenetics is another emerging technology in crop production Some of these biotech products encourage the use of different herbicide programs, while others replicate some advantages of crop protection products

The bottom line is, today's farmers and ranchers are getting better at what they do so they can meet world needs today and in the future. Let s celebrate their efforts during National Agricultural Week, March 15-21.

Now Is The Time

To Maintain Conservation Plans

Federal government agencies are under pressure to enforce the nation's Clean Water Act. They are focusing on animal waste management and soil erosion. The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) recently announced plans to develop regulations requiring large animal operations to obtain permits and develop nutrient management plans. The permits would allow EPA to enter farms and do compliance audits. Every commercial farm regardless of size should have a soil conservation plan and nutrient management plan developed and implemented for the farm. Today's society is requiring good stewardship as a necessary component of every farm. By implementing these plans, you are practicing good stewardship and maintaining the sustainability of the farm. Such inexpensive practices as buffer strips, sod waterways and storm water management would go a long way in addressing environmental concerns Farmers need to look at their operating practices and make changes now The government is giving us a window of opportunity to come into compliance. How you use this time will depend on the type of government regulations we will have in the future

To Practice Good Management Practices

According to Greg Andrews, an Iowa attorney, no amount of public relations, right to farm acts, or cover-ups will protect farmers from lawsuits if the farmer does not farm in an environmentally friendly manner. Farmers must become environmentalists when it comes to their farming operations. Follow your soil conservation and nutrient management plans. Andrews offered the following advice as a legal defense for a lawsuit. Practice good public relations. Need to be open and honest. Talk with your neighbors and notify them in advance to nuisance operations (manure spreading, noise, etc.) Seek their input. Foster goodwill. Give tours and briefings about your operation. A couple of nights at the local motel during manure spreading could be the cheapest way of handling neighbors Remember, an average lawsuit costs $20,000. Keep careful records of your activities. Record dates, times and weather conditions. Document when you did certain activities. The business of farming is maturing and as a result farmers need to develop more sophisticated business practices.

To Look At Change

Agriculture is changing into a high technology business according to Sano Shimoda, BioScience Securities. We are witnessing the early stages of the bio-transformation of agriculture. The new technologies will reshape the basic tenets of agriculture, transform agriculture and the agribusiness infrastructure, expand the dimensions of agriculture and redefine the role of agriculture in the economy. The core drivers of the new age of agriculture will be biotechnology and precision agriculture. They will create a technology generated industrial revolution in agriculture. This will reformulate the keys drivers of growth, transform the agriculture production system from today's production driven system to tomorrow's end user demand driven system. The role of the farmer will change from farmer to end user to being a part of a vertically integrated supply and production complex which will expand the dimension of agriculture to an industrial base. Those farmers who will survive int he future will be developing business plans now to adapt to these emerging technologies.

TROUBLING THE TEACHER

March 22, 1998

Background Scripture:
Mark 5:21-43
Devotional Reading:
I Corinthians 1:18-31

From 1965 to 1975 a weekly worship service of spiritual healing was part of the ongoing program of my pastorate at Calvary United Methodiest Church in Mohnton, Pennsylvania.

There was nothing dramatic about the mechanics of this service. It was quiet, supportive and often surprisingly effective. While I would never claim that either I or my associates — another UMC minister and a prominent local medical doctor — ever healed anyone, God alone does that — we were nevertheless aware that this ministry was beneficial to hundreds of people who were seeking healing of mind, body or spirit. At least three local physicians referred one or more of their patients to us or asked us to put them on our prayer list. Some physicians who knew little or nothing about us told their patients that "whatever it is you're doing, keep on doing it!"

What did we experience? We saw a large number of people improve and get well over a period of time; practically all of these were under a doctor's care. We saw a significant number of people who experienced remissions of their illness or the lessening of pain and suffering as their illness progressed.

ULTIMATE HEALING

We saw some of our patients die and we learned to help them to die — as victors, not victims. We came to regard death as part of God's plan for life and, in effect, the opportunity for ultimate healing. And we saw a much smaller number of people healed almost spontaneously, although these were the exception, not the rule.

There were lots of other benefits from this ministry. It taught people to forgive and be forgiven. Receiving prayer requests from all over the world, this ministry helped to widen our horizons and bring us into contact with a wide variety of people. It involved many in a lifelong commitment to pray as intercessors for others. It made real to some the power of God in the most tangible way. We came to realize that we needed to pray and work for healing of relationships, families, churches, communities and our broken world.

Even after I left that parish in Pennsylvania, I continued my interest and involvement in the church's ministry of healing, conducting seminars, traveling around the world to examine other healing ministries, and in 1977 writing a book, Rediscovering the Gift of Healing, published by Abingdon Press and later reissued by Samuel Weiser Co.

3-FOLD MISSION

All of the above is simply an introduction to my perspective on the healing ministry of Jesus. I believe that Jesus came with a threefold mission of preaching, teaching and healing — and that he commissioned his disciples and the Church to continue that mission. Over the years I have been associated with scores of medical doctors — but fewer clergy — who have shared that conviction.

There are lots of healing accounts in the four gospels, including Mark. In Mark 5:21 through 3:6 there are two healings that are very instructive for us. First, both Jairus, the ruler of the synagogue, and the unnamed woman with a hemorrhage, come to Jesus because they believe he can effect healing. Notice the faith with which Jairus says to Jesus, "My little daughter is at the point of death. Come and lay your hands on her, so that she may be made well, and live" (5:23). And the unknown woman says to herself: "If I touch even his garments, I shall be made well" (5:28).

Neither apparently know of Jesus except by reputation, but they trust him to be able to provide healing. "Daughter," says Jesus to the unknown woman, "your faith has made you well; go in peace, and be healed of your disease" (5:34). When Jairus is told that his daughter is already dead, Jesus appeals to his faith, saying: "Do not fear, only believe" (5:36). The result: the woman is healed of her hemorrhaging and the little girl is restored to life.

This is not magic or supernatural hocus-pocus, but simply the recognition that faith in Jesus Christ can open the door through which healing must come into our lives. The friends of Jairus said to him, "Your daughter is dead. Why trouble the Teacher any further?" (5:35). Yet that is exactly what Jesus wants us to do, to continue to "trouble" him so that we may experience the wholeness for which God created us.

The returns shown are based on historical results and are not intended to indicate future performance. The investment return and principal value of an investment in the Fund will fluctuate so that an investor's shares when redeemed may be worth more or less than their original cost. Performance would have been lower if fees had not been waived in various periods. Calculations are not adjusted for income taxes payable on those amounts by taxable accounts.

ATTENTION TOBACCO FARMERS

Don't plant another crop of tobacco until the old one is sold

Maryland auction people say as long as we have pin hooker buyers, our auction barn will not work We must have company buyers And we need farmers to help put that together.

Talk or write to people in control.

Vote for the quota, coming on March 24 This would be better than what we have now The quota will bring company buyers and price support When you vote for the quota, don't exclude type 41. Tobacco buyers say they only need a small amount of 41 next year Watch out for a big price cut

There is possibly 8 million pounds of tobacco still on farms The best is left on farms We are sending samples weekly of agriculture as it relates to public perception issues. In talking about the business lifecycle, he explained that growth is the number one reason businesses both prosper and fail.

Carl Bender, a dairyman from Accident, in Garrett County, was elected president of the Maryland Holstein Association He steps into the role after serving as vice-president for the past two years. Mr Bender and his wife, Martha, milk 182 registered Holsteins at two different farms in Garrett County Bender replaces Jason Myers of New Windsor, who stepped down after serving two years as president

Elected vice-president of the organization was Arthur Rhoderick, of Hagerstown. Anita Hill, Thurmont, will continue to serve as secretary-treasurer

Mr. Bender thanked the group for the opportunity to work with a great group of breeders He credits much of the success of Maryland's club to Anita Hill Her behind the scenes work enables the organization to run as smoothly as it does, he said, enabling the leadership to reach its full potential "Two years ago when they asked if I'd be vice-president, if Anita Hill hadn't been secretary, I'm not sure if I would have accepted it," he said.

Mr Bender said he feels another strong point of the Maryland club is its youth participation. He is encouraged by the young people who are so active in agriculture and in the youth programs "If you watch how you do things, there's still a future in farming," he said.

No new directors were elected at this year's meeting.

Jessica Fritz was awarded a $2,000. scholarship by the Maryland Holstein Association to continue her studies in Dairy Science at the University of Maryland. Four $750. scholarships were also awarded, and went to Autumn Guyton, Kelli Savage, Kelly Myers, and Jana Edwards.

Dairy Co-ops Want Compact Legislation

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — "The old status quo of dairy farming is out the door," says Gordon Hoover, Lancaster County dairy producer. "Dairy compacts are another tool that farmers can use in these changing times for pricing their milk."

Hoover, a director of Land O'Lakes, was one of several dairy cooperative leaders and staff representatives who met last Friday with Senator Noah Wenger, acting chairman of the state Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee, to discuss the issue of dairy compacts. Joining forces in the drive for compact legislation to be addressed in Pennsylvania are Dairylea, Dairy Farmers of America, Land O'Lakes and Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers.

On March 10, Senator Wenger's office announced an informational hearing on dairy compacts to be held April 3 in Williamsport for industry and public input on the legislative issue. The hearing is scheduled to run from 9 a.m. through 4 p.m. at the Professional Development Center of the Pennsylvania College of Technology, with time allowed in the agenda for producer comments.

Dairy cooperatives are taking a lead role in pushing for compact legislation to be addressed in Pennsylvania. Though Senate Bill 170 went to the Senate Ag Committee in January 1997, a House Bill, HB 2302, was introduced and referred to the House Ag Committee on March 11, cosponsored by 40 of the state's legislators.

Push for the compact legislation comes on the heels of higher Class I milk prices being paid to dairy producers involved in the New England Dairy Compact. That compact, birthed under the auspices of the 1996 Farm Bill and upheld through court challenges since taking effect last summer, has established a $16.94 hundredweight price on all Class I milk sold in the compact area. As the federal order Class I price fluctuates with seasonal formula price swings, the Compact collects the additional monies above the federal order level and returns it to dairy producers within the pricing area.

Under the statutes of the compact structure, states contiguous to a compact state can join in the umbrella of regional compact pricing. However, to do so, a joining state must have identical dairy compact legislation passed in its state governing body. New Jersey has passed compact legislation. It has passed in New York's Senate and is under debate on the Assembly side. Dairy cooperative leaders eye having Pennsylvania legislation passed and in place if New York's is successful.

With the compact's current pricing structure set to run only to April 1999, when Federal Order

Dairy Co-ops

reform is to be completed, the cooperative leaders acknowledge the time frame for generating additional income to dairy producers via the current compact, is a short one. However, given uncertainty over the future of federal involvement in milk marketing, the compact structure is further seen as a tool for pricing within a fluid marketing region. Compact discussion continues under way in several other parts of the nation, with numerous states having passed, or in process or trying to pass, supporting legislation.

One question being raised on the compact issue is the potential of increased production within the region in response to higher milk prices. More production would lower the Class I utilization in the compact area, and the volume on which the compact price would be paid, diluting the premium. Milk volume in the compact area is already reported to be higher, whether due to production response from within the compact areas, normal seasonal production upswings or more milk flowing into the compact's boundaries than before to take advantage of the price.

The compact structure does have built within it a pricing mechanism to withhold premium monies from payment to producers if production within the region climbs faster than that of the rest of the country, and to an extent where product would have to be purchased by the Commodity Credit Corporation to remove it from the market. According to Gardner, a large portion of the February premium will be escrowed, with funds held in anticipation of helping to fund possible CCC purchases. With most of the funds in escrow, the February compact premium per hundredweight as estimated to be a few cents.

Traditionally, dairy production trends upward in the spring due to improved grazing conditions with warming weather, closely followed by diminished Class I utilization as schools recess for summer vacation. The trend generally reverses in late summer, sometimes dramatically, as hot weather curtails milk output and schools return to classes.

New Produce Auction To Begin

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

TERRE HILL (Lancaster Co.) — A new produce auction, Weaverland Produce, will soon open southwest of here on Long Lane Road between Quarry and Martindale Road.

The Weaverland Produce Company, composed of 34 produce growers in the region, received conditional approval from the East Earl Township supervisors recently to begin construction of the proposed 27,600 square foot building.

The building will accommodate growers and buyers from the region, similar to the Leola Produce Auction on Brethren Church Road in Leola.

According to Carl Hoover, on whose property the auction will be constructed under private contracts with the company, the auction still needs Department of Environmental Protection approval before construction can begin. The site is on approximately five acres of land of which nine has been subdivided. The site can be expanded as the business grows, according to Hoover, who is secretary of the company.

"Time is of the essence," emphasizes Lewis Gardner, Potter County dairy producers and chairman of the Northeast Council of Dairy Farmers of America. "Dairy producers operating under the Northeast Compact are seeing a return of a larger part of the consumer's dollars spent for milk. We encourage Pennsylvania dairy producers to show their support for passing compact legislation here by attending the hearing."

The members of Weaverland Produce have raised about $400,000, of which half is spent on obtaining the necessary permits and other items, according to Hoover.

Hoover noted that enough area was needed for a water retention pond, a sand mount area for sewer, an alternate sewer mount area, stabilization and swails, and grass areas. In addition, according to the township, the company must plant 65 trees.

Hoover, who plans to grow about three acres of produce himself, finishes steers on the property and has his own tractor repair shop.

President of the corporation is Moses B. Sensenig, East Earl.

Hoover noted that the starting date is set for perhaps June 1, though the company would like to begin in mid-May if they could. "We talked to a lot of groups interested in buying at the auction," said Hoover.

The auction, with access to Rt. 897 to the east and Rt. 322 to the west, can be reached by many growers. When the company was formed in October last year, Hoover noted the intent was to involve as many growers as possible that were familiar with auctions such as Leola as an outlet for their crops.

Also, this week, several auctions announced the starting dates and times for several auctions. Many begin with flowers and bedding plants or special Easter sales. They are:

- Cumberland Valley Produce Auction, Shippensburg. Begins March 31 and every Tuesday and Thursday at 9 a.m.
- Hope Produce, Mount Hope, Ohio. Begins April 28 up to June at 10 a.m., then also Tuesdays and Thursdays in June.
- Kirkwood Produce, Kirkwood. Begins April 8 at 10 a.m., continuing Wednesdays through April and including Tuesdays and Thursdays in June.
- Kutztown Produce, Fleetwood. Begins March 24 at 10 a.m., every Tuesday and Thursday.
- Leola Produce, Leola. Specializes in flowers before Easter. Begins Tuesday, March 31 at 10 a.m. and, April 2, is held Tuesdays and Thursdays.
- Morrison Cove Produce, Roaring Spring. Begins Tuesday, March 31 with Easter flowers each Tuesday for a few weeks.
- Shippensburg Produce Auction, Shippensburg. This produce auction runs all year.
- Windmill Produce Auction, Penn Yan, N.Y. Begins May 1 at 10 a.m. and continues every Friday.

Carroll County Milkers' School Set

WESTMINSTER, Md. — Milkers' School has been scheduled for Carroll County on March 25.

Recently, cooperatives and processors have increased their emphasis on milk quality. As we all know, milk quality starts on the farm.

This school is designed to provide milkers with the latest information on milking techniques and associated practices. Topics included are anatomy of the udder, milk letdown, somatic cells and the CMT, costs of mastitis, milking equipment performance, causes of mastitis, teat dipping, cleaning milking equipment, treatment and prevention of mastitis, milking techniques, residue avoidance, and much more.

Past participants in this program have found it to be very rewarding and of great use. It is targeted to the folks that are milking the cows, but herdsmen and herd owners are encouraged to attend with the milkers to allow cooperative learning.

This school will be held at the Carroll County Extension Office on March 25 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. The registration fee is $25 per person and will include lunch and reference materials. Checks should be made payable to Carroll County EAC and sent to 700 Agriculture Center, Westminster, MD 21157. The registration deadline is March 23.

Dairy farmers and agri business people, Department of Agriculture representatives, and others comprise their core group. However, they are always open to including new people who can contribute new ideas. They also have tremendous support from the school personnel including the custodial staff, cafeteria workers, teachers, and administrators.

The event has grown ever since it started nine years ago.

"The first one we had about 450 people," said Place. "We were impressed with that and it's been growing ever since. Most years we have between 500 and 600 participants but the last couple of years we've had over 700."

Place admits that the actual number of dairy farmers is hard to estimate but he is sure that the bulk of the attendants are either dairy farmers or tied to dairy farming in some way.

"We feel that there's education that takes place and think it does a lot with building the dairy community in the area. Hopefully people leave with a positive feeling. That's hard to measure, but I think that's something I'm really happy about . . . to get people together with a common cause."

More than 800 people and exhibitors attended the 1998 Susquehanna County Dairy Day. Featured at the event were workshops on alternative agriculture, stress management, agronomy tips, and estate planning. Visitors could also spend time at each of the 70 exhibitors and bid on a prize winning pie from the pie contest.

Jake Stoltzfus of Star Silos agrees that Susquehanna County Dairy Day in a positive experience.

"I think this is one of the best dairy days in the state," he said. "They try to have something for everyone."

This year's program included workshops on alternative agriculture ideas including heifer raising as a business and stone quarry management, as well as agronomy issues such as adjusting your corn planter, biotechnology, and preventing pesticide drift.

Other participants could listen to a presentation called "Headbanging 101," which related stress management ideas, provided valuable tips on food safety, allowed them to take advantage of free blood pressure screenings, or bare their arms for a tetanus shot. Representatives from Farm Credit and the Cooperative Extension Service were also available to answer questions about estate planning.

Participants were invited to listen to the encouraging words of Maria Fanning, director of career services and cooperative education at Keystone College, before bidding on one of 27 pies that were entered in the annual pie contest.

When not attending one of the informational seminars, participants had the opportunity to visit 72 exhibitors and grab a carton of free milk to quench their thirst.

In a well attended program on alternative agriculture, David Bradstreet enthusiastically told the group that alternative agriculture can enhance on-farm income.

"You've got to throw out all the rules of what you're used to and try new things," said Bradstreet. "There are lots of opportunities out there."

Examples of enterprises that could work on your farm include small fruit production, bees/honey, rabbits, greenhouse, kennels, and ornamental plants — the list goes as far as the imagination can take you.

Bradstreet knows of one farm family that cuts and dries weeds and sells them to crafters. Another is involved in raising game birds for various hunting organizations.

"The most important thing," said Bradstreet, "is that the whole family buys into the project."

Also important is that the new enterprise fits into the time the family has.

Alternative agriculture doesn't necessarily mean buying into a whole new enterprise. It could be as simple as adjusting the way you do things.

"You could consider a different production system that is unique, such as organic production, or you might consider direct marketing."

Because it's derived from fungicides found in certain wild mushrooms, new QUADRIS® fungicide has its roots firmly planted in nature. As a result, it carries less risk to workers and the environment than other currently registered fungicides.

Yet QUADRIS is merciless to a broad spectrum of tomato diseases. Its novel mode of action combines preventative and systemic powers to control early blight, late blight, anthracnose, Septoria leaf spot and other problems. All told, QUADRIS is the strongest and most unique disease prevention ever available.

Thanks for the idea, Mom.

Susquehanna County Dairy Day Draws More Than 800

When considering a new enterprise, it's also important to consider your goals and resources. Is the new project meant to supplement income, replace the existing enterprise, or create on-farm employment? What are your physical resources, marketing potential, financial constraints, or labor availability?

"Some of the most successful alternative agriculture projects are kids' projects," said Bradstreet, "because the kids don't know something won't work. They're willing to try new things."

How you market your product can make or break you success.

There is a hog producer in his area who raises hogs for specialty barbecues. He raises about 150 per year and sells them for $.65 per pound.

"People don't know what the market price is. People will pay for what they want, not what they have to have," said Bradstreet.

If the thought of alternative agriculture has elevated the stress levels at your farm, you could relate to the wisdom of Karen Bracey, Wyoming County Cooperative Extension agent, in her presentation, "Headbanging 101."

"If there's one thing you can do (to reduce stress), it is to take your work seriously and yourself lightly," said Bracey.

She noted that we tend to make our own stress but we don't necessarily have to carry that stress around with us all the time.

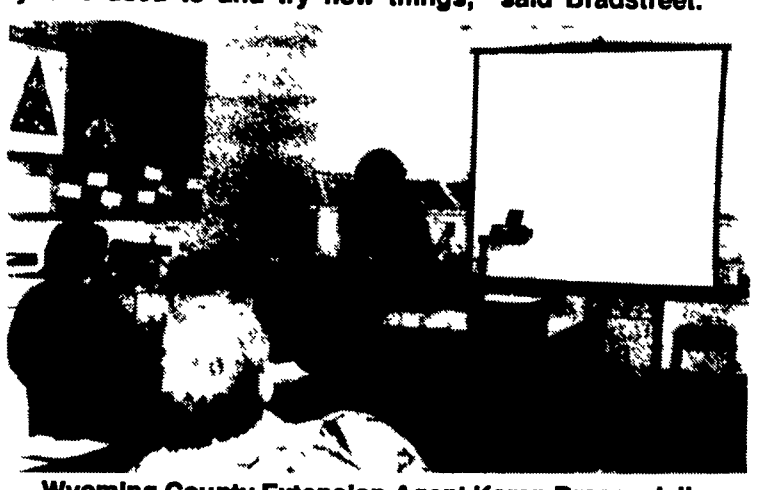
"Once you've been through some really lousy things and survived them, you strengthen your character. That gives us confidence to go through other things and perspective to know what's important and what's not."

She then illustrated her idea of stress as psychological gravity with a bag and 40 pounds of bricks. Each time something stressful happened in her day, like her child throwing a tantrum causing her to be late for work, or getting a flat tire, she added yet another brick to her bag. By the end of the day, her bag was full, yet she still had other tasks to complete. The extra "40 pounds" of stress made the remaining tasks more difficult.

A meal was provided to all Dairy Day participants free of charge, compliments of more than 70 commercial exhibitors. Here Susquehanna County Dairy Ambassador Stacy Rezykowski, right, and Roselyn Adams offer milk to all who come through the line.

Dairyman Roderick Grosvenor of Gibson receives a tetanus vaccination from Pennsylvania Department of Health Injury Prevention Coordinator Theresa Warnagiris at the 1997 Susquehanna County Dairy Day. Warnagiris notes that everyone, especially farmers, should receive a booster every 10 years. In total, 39 tetanus shots were given and 26 participants were screened for skin cancer at the event.

David Bradstreet, Broome County, N.Y. extension agent, exchanges alternative agriculture ideas with dairy producer Dale Empet and maple syrup producer Tim Empet, both of Kingsley. "You've got to throw out all the rules of what you're used to and try new things," said Bradstreet.



Wyoming County Extension Agent Karen Bracey delivers a program on stress management at dairy day.

"I want to thank you from all the chefs of the world and all the wonderful cheesecake that you make possible. I want to thank you for all the senior citizens of the world who are healthy today because they drank milk. I want to thank you for all the people enjoying leisure sports. Because of the time you spend producing food, they don't have to worry about having enough."

She also touched on alternative ways that farmers can make a living, highlighting the immeasurable success of Orville Reddenbacher and his popcorn.

"He knew what he was doing and he did it well," said Fanning.

She also touched on the importance of advertising our product and of getting agricultural curriculum in elementary schools.

"We need agriculture in our schools so people know what to do," she said. "My goodness, we're heading toward having a country full of people who don't know how to produce anything!"

Following Fanning's presentation, 27 pies were auctioned off, bringing a total of $1,308 to be divided between the 4-H dairy program and the dairy princess program.

Visitors, exhibitors, and hosts agreed the day was a success.

"I was very happy," said Place, county extension director.

LDHIA Board Meets In February

JOE GRAYBEAL
President

The committees of LDHIA met in the morning with the ful board conducting business in the afternoon. Rodney Denlinger presented tokens of appreciation to the four lab technicians for the recent 100 percent Quality Certification received from NDHIA. The lab has received the 100 percent Quality Certification four consecutive years.

The volume of samples passing through the lab continues to grow. LDHIA is receiving lab work from other affiliates for MUN testing. The new wet chemistry Bentley equipment is performing exceptionally well and allowing some herds to use bulk tank MUN testing on a trial basis. Early results are encouraging but not independently verified. The Board approved a proposal from the lab committee for pricing of samples tested.

The finance committee, chaired by Clair Oberholtzer, brought two proposals before the Board. The first was to purchase a new computer for the office. This computer will be used by Pam Lehman to input "basic" herds. LDHIA is experiencing rapid growth in this area, and expects this growth to continue. The second proposal dealt with the method of purchasing the new Bentley MUN equipment. Both proposals were approved by the Board.

The field committee, chaired by Steve Hershey, updated the Board in several areas of interest. Work is continuing on the appropriate method to promote records of supervised and unsupervised herds. Several approaches are being reviewed with plans to be finalized in the near future.

A proposal was put before the Board to increase field support staff with a part-time position. A substantial number of new herds are joining LDHIA and the increase in staff is expected. The proposal was approved. Time was spent by the Board reviewing the areas now receiving service from LDHIA and where future growth will likely occur.

The number of herds using PCDART has grown to 70. Steve Hershey and Jere High are updating all PCDART herds to version 6.2. This includes the new graphics program. PCDART workshops are scheduled for March 12 and 19 at the lab.

Jay Mylin, general manager, reported that LDHIA is running smoothly. Everyone is very busy as the increased growth is filling everyone's schedules to the fullest. Management is constantly reviewing operations to keep excellent service to the members while working to keep overhead costs to a minimum. Management is aware that dairy farmers are experiencing similar concerns. The next meeting of the Board is April 16.

Dean Amick Wins National DHIA Award

SCOTT WILLIAMS
Training Coordinator

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Dean Amick, Pennsylvania DHIA, is the recipient of the 1997 Martin A. Wilson Memorial Award.

Dean Began his 40-year plus career with Pennsylvania DHIA in 1954 testing 11 herds totaling 400 cows. Sixteen years later he was testing a 90-herd circuit.

In 1970, Dean was chosen to manage Pennsylvania DHIA's first Centralized Milk Testing Lab. This lab was one of the first large-scale labs nationwide.

Dean was responsible for another first in the late 1970s when he brought Pennsylvania's lab into the computer age, making it the first computerized lab operation in the country. His efforts changed lab operations nationwide making them more efficient and improving the quality of their testing.

Dean assumed responsibility for all Pennsylvania DHIA support operations in 1988. In this capacity, he developed a system to transport milk samples with refrigerated trucks, a procedure for recycling sample vials and a unique liquid preservative dispenser for vial preparation.

Dean has been the director of field operations and marketing since 1990. He supervises over 130 DHIA technicians testing over 220,000 cows. Dean has been inducted into the DHIA Hall of Fame.

Dean also was the first recipient for the Dean Amick Award of Excellence. This award was created in honor of Dean for his many years of service and many accomplishment within DHIA.

Currently, Dean is a member of Dairy Shrine and The Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show committee. He is also a former president of NALMA.

Dean and his wife, Shirley, have two children and one grandchild.

From the left, Dean Amick, director of field operations and marketing for the Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association, shows the national Martin A. Wilson Memorial Award, and is congratulated by Norm Hershey, president of Pa.DHIA, who is also vice president of National DHIA.

Part II: Nutrient Management Proposals Challenge Farming

Board gave a rough overview of the situation as it was presented to Pennsylvania.

In essence, it is this: it appears imminent that nutrient managment planning here will have to address phophorus as much as nitrogen (currently the nutrient of most concern to Pennsylvania); and that means manures high in phosphorus will not be allowed to be applied on croplands with existing adequate to excessive levels of phosphorus; and since manures generally provide more phosphorus than plants need, farmers will be forced to purchase nitrogen to fulfill plant requirements, while at the same time finding some means of disposing of unusable manure.

To Pennsylvania's southern neighbors, according to a representative of the Maryland Department of Agriculture, it appears imminent that proposed legislation there (Gov. Paris Glendening's proposal has been endorsed by the Maryland Farm Bureau) would require all farms 10 acres or more, regardless of livestock raised or owned, to have nutrient management plans based on phosphorus.

Those who have proposed the legislation already have proposed state funding to help cost-share the expense of shipping manure out of the Maryland Eastern Shore, as well as for helping to pay for the nitrogen that farmers would have to buy to raise crops on the high phosphorus soils.

According to information presented to the Pennsylvania SCS Nutrient Management Advisory Board, in most cases balancing the nutrient load for fields means that most manures would provide the limit for phosphorus well before reaching the need for nitrogen.

It means that nitrogen will have to a purchased nutrient in many, if not most, cases.

The irony of the situation is that phosphorus is not directly a human health threat, while nitrogen can be.

The only reason for the heightened concern about phosphorus is that it does stimulate algae and bacterial blooms, which can deplete dissolved oxygen levels in water, thereby killing fish; and the algae can serve as food and thus indirectly may provide the stimulus for boosting pfisteria piscicidasi populations.

Whether phosphorus causes pfisteria to turn into a fish killer or emit neurotoxins into the waters is uncertain, though that is another premise for the emphasis on phosphorus.

However, there is another possibility, something seemingly more biologically plausible, that could discount the role of phosphorus as causing pfisteria to kill fish.

It has been suggested that, because the timing of the pfisteria problem coincided with a change in the movement of the fish species most affected, that perhaps a chemical released by migrating schools of fish may have actually triggered the switch in the pfisteria from feeding on alga to fish.

Many life forms are advantageous feeders and can switch from food source to food source on a seasonal, or other basis. At the core of that is a biological rule of thumb: life seeks out whatever provides the most nutrition for the least amount of work.

However, not enough money or time has been devoted to discovering the actual cause.

In addition to the pfisteria problems, the EPA cites major dumpings of manure into waterways and potentials for future pollutings to occur as enough reason to increase national regulatory control of livestock operations in the United States.

In Pennsylvania, there has been no proposal for creating an educational, testing and certification program for applying manure on land, but that is part of some of the proposals for Maryland.

Pennsylvania does have a certification program for those who develop nutrient management plans — a document describing a livestock farmer's plan of practices and actions to account for the safe handling and disposition of manures generated on a livestock farm.

While Pennsylvania agriculture and environmental groups, including those representing organizations to revive and protect the Chesapeake Bay aquatic ecosystems, developed the state Nutrient Management Act and the regulations, the federal initiative has already caused changes.

However, proposed regulatory changes in Pennsylvania for issuing permits for the construction of manure storage facilities are to increase, and a federal National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System (NPDES) permit and a state Part II permit are to be required in addition to a nutrient management plan.

According to Carol Young with the state Department of Environmental Protection, work is being done to revise state regulations covering the public review of environmental permits required for large livestock feeding operations.

She told the board that while there is no official moratorium on approving permit applications for construction of new or expanded manure storage facilities, since the application form and permits have not yet been revised, in effect there are several known applicants who have been put on hold until the revisions can be made.

Hileman Heads Genex Board

BINGHAMTON, N.Y. — The Genex division of Cooperative Resources International (RCI), held its annual meeting Tuesday at the Holiday Inn-Arena. According to Skip Jensen, retiring president, the new electly officers are: Dave Hileman, Tyrone, president; Joe Greenbacker, Durham, CT, vice president; and Lanny Conerly, Kentwood, LA, secretary.

According to the annual report, 1997, the first full year of operations for Genex/CRI was a year of change and a year of success.

The sire sampling programs of the three A.I. subsidiaries of CRI continue to yield top new proven sires in all dairy breeds. In the Holstein breed, 31 new graduates were added to the proven sire lineup. These additions increased the average Net Merit dollar value of the available proven sires from $160 in 1996 to $176 in 1997. The average of the top 10 Holstein sires proven in the CRI system and available through Genex/CRI increased from $197 to $220 Net Merit during the year.

1997 also saw the introduction of sires from the New Zealand Livestock Improvement Cooperative. These sires, along with those from Holland and Norway, give Genex/CRI members and customers access to a strong, diversified genetic offering.

Net Merit was adopted in 1997 as the primary selection tool for those dairy producers who seek high-producing, long-lasting cows. The Net Merit index developed by USDA researchers combines production evaluations with trait evaluations which have a demonstrated effect on longevity. This simple, easy-to-use tool will aid producers in developing the profit potential of their herds.

During 1997, Genex?CRI achieved a net operating margin of $697,869 on sales of $27,669,732. This represents a 2.5% net return on sales, which was slightly less than the cooperatives goal of 4%. Genex's overall margin, including operating and non-operating income and expense, was $2,628,173. This year's margin was highly influenced by the sale of the Lancaster headquarters facility which generated substantial income. As agreed in the merger plan, the net after-tax gain from this sale will be returned to the former Atlantic members of record.

Genex/CRI expanded its membership area to include Virginia and the eastern half of West Virginia. Membership meetings were held and delegates elected. Genex/CRI technicians performed 5,628 more inseminations during 1997 than in the previous year. Some of this growth occured in areas where new technician service was introduced, while additional growth occurred in some of the established technician areas. Declining cow numbers continue to impact technician service in some areas, but we anticipate our total number of technicians will increase during the next year.

The genetic development program, or sampling program is a key to maintaining the strength and superiority of the future proven sire lineup. Changes in herd management practices impacting the amount of usable information obtained in sampling programs was the reason given to establish a cooperator herd program. This cooperator herd program will provide closer monitoring and control of the use of young sires as well as increased benefits to those producers providing complete information on the daughters of young sires. These changes will help assure Genex/CRI members a continual supply of reliable superior bulls in the coming years.

During 1997, the board and staff took a number of steps to position the cooperative to be able to adjust to the rapidly changing dairy industry. How dairy service organizations will realign themselves to provide efficient and effective service in the future is not totally clear, so establishing flexible positions has been extremely important.

The quality of the people bringing products and services to the farm, as well as the innovation of these products, continues to be very important. To this end, considerable emphasis was placed on employee development during 1997. New training programs, for established, as well as new employees, were developed and implemented. Team building through out Genex/CRI has been emphasized. Recruitment and selection processes for hiring new employees is under study. In short, major emphasis has been given to maintaining the superiority of Genex/CRI employees so thy can provide an increased level of service.

During the year a number of cost reduction steps were implemented, some resulting in immediate reductions, while others are more long range in nature. An example of these changes can be seen in the way the sire programs were operating. When Genex joined CRI and began sharing the results of the other A.I. subsidiaries' sampling programs, we gained efficiency in the use of the top sires. This allowed a reduction in the number of young sires being sampled each year; thus, reducing operating costs by lowering the number of sires purchased and housed.

Many other changes have been made to increase efficiencies and position the cooperative for the future. The finance division implemented a uniform accounting system throughout CRI which will lead to more timely financial reporting. The membr equity records for LABC, Atlantic and Eastern were integrated into the CRI record system. Member equity records are now computerized. Considerable savings occurred through the coordination of national advertising and other promotional materials. Although much was accomplished in areas like these during 1997, there are other areas that will need to be examined if we are to remain cost competitive in the years ahead.

Part II: Nutrient Management Proposals Challenge Farming

They are expected soon.

According to a report in the Jan. 23 issue of the DEP UPDATE newsletter, "The new policy will require full environmental permits for large oeprations along with opportunities for public review and ocmment and a more simplified set of rules for smaller operations.

"Over the past few months, there has been confusion over how the environmental impacts of large livestock feeding operations are regulated in Pehnsylvania," DEP Secretary James Seif stated in the newsletter. "We hope the policy we announced ... will clear up that confusion and help us put in place a longer range strategy for dealing with these facilities over the next few months."

What it means is that the state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) has adopted an interim policy, until a new policy is adopted, that would allow increased public awareness and participation in the awarding of environmental permits to those seeking to build or expand concentrated animal operations (CAOs) for a s).

A CAO is a Pennsylvania term for a large-density livestock production operation. The EPA refers to them as Concentrate Animal Feeding Operations (CAFOs) and Animal Feeding Operations (AFOs).

A CAO is a high-density livestock operations sited on farmland with too little available cropland or land in vegetative state to assimilate the nutrients available in the manure produced by the operations.

Pennsylvania's law does not discourage such facilities, it merely requires the operators to think through their operation, consider all the environmental impacts, and make some plan for implementing practices that control the flow of nutrients so as to prevent them from becoming a source of excessive nutrients in water.

What the EPA has proposed in its draft strategy (available for complete review on the EPA internet homepage at http://www.epa.gov/owm) is to consider animal feeding operations as "point sources" or pollution, requiring NPDES permits.

DEP's Young said that while the revised permits for agriculture will not actually indicate that there is any discharge coming from the animal feeding operations, the permit is still being required.

She also said that Pennsylvania is negotiating with EPA to allow as much of the state's program to remain intact. For example, while the EPA has designated management requirements for farms that pose a threat of releasing polluting loads of nutrients into waterways, DEP has proposed that Pennsylvania considers only those farms that are defined by the state as CAOs to fall within that realm, thereby attempting to prevent a situation in which every farm would receive state and federal permitting oversight.

Under the interim policy, new concentrated animal feeding operations with 1,000 animal equivalent unites of more will have to:

- Have a nutrient managment plan required by the state Nutrient Management Act.
- Have a Chapter 102 erosion and sedimentation control plan.
- If the project involves and earth disturbance of five acres or more, an NPDES permit for stormwater discharge (during the construction phase).
- If a manure handling facility has a storage lagoon or other structure is built, a Part II water quality permit will be required and the facility will have to meet siting, design, monitoring and operational standards. A full NPDES water quality permit will also be required covering similar environmental concerns.
- The public will have the opportunity to be involved in reviewing both the Part II and the full NPDES water quality permit as well as opportunities for public hearings. Public notice of proposed facilities will go to local officials and be published in local newspapers and the Pennsylvania Bulletin.

While there is much more to the full story behind all of the changes, those interested in reading the details can learn more by visiting the EPA website or the Pennsyvlania DEP Internet site at www.dep.state.pa.us.

Those wishing to comment on the EPA draft strategy on Animal Feeding Opertions have until May 1, 1998 to submit comments to: Ruby Cooper-Ford, National AFO Program Manager, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, 401 M Street, S.W., Mail Code 4203, Washington DC 20460.

Or they can be sent via electronic mail at Ford.Ruby@epamail.epa.gov).

Lancaster County Conservancy Receives Funds

CONOY TOWNSHIP (Lancaster Co.) — On behalf of Gov. Tom Ridge, state Department of Conservation and Natural Resources (DCNR) Deputy Secretary Karen Deklinski recently presented Lancaster County Conservancy members with a $136,000 ceremonial check from the Land Trust Grant Program to acquire land in Conoy, Martic and Providence townships, Lancaster County.

"These grants are an important part of the Ridge Administration's work to preserve and conserve Pennsylvania's precious natural resources," Deklinski said. "Through these land-trust grants, we are helping the Lancaster County Conservancy to continue its commitment to protecting Pennsylvania's valuable natural areas and open spaces."

The Lancaster County Conservancy received a $100,000 grant to acquire 83 acres in Martic and Providence townships to expand the Hauer-Trout Run Nature Preserve. They also received a $36,000 grant for the acquisition of 40 woodland acres surrounding a boulder cave in Conoy Township.

These grants were part of $3.7 million in funding for 27 statewide grants through the Keystone Land Trust Grant Program, administered by DCNR. The program is part of the Ridge Administration's Community Conservation Partnership initiative, a four-year, $75 million grant and technical assistance initiative that provides funding to help communities and non-profit organization conserve natural and cultural resources, provide outdoor recreation, enhance tourism, and foster community and economic development.

Funded through the Keystone Recreation, Park and Conservation Fund Act, the grant program provides up to 50 percent of the cost of the project. These 27 grants will acquire more than 9,200 acres of critical habitat and significant open-space areas. Since the program began in 1995, more than $12.1 million in Keystone funding has been approved to assist with the acquisition of nearly 17,700 acres. An additional $600,000 has been approved for open space and natural areas planning projects.

Conservation Farmer

Conservation District will honor Woland as the Conservation Farmer of the Year at the district's banquet on April 2.

Woland cares for a home farm and another rented farm nearby. Altogether, he manages 115 tillable acres, of which 50 are in corn, 45 in soybeans, and about 20 acres in wheat. He follows a corn/soybeans/corn/soybeans/wheat rotation.

According to records maintained by the district, on his home farm, Woland maintains 79.6 acres in no-till and 77.2 acres are in contour fields. On the rented ground, 32 acres are no-tilled and there is less than an acre with a waterway.

Other conservation practices Woland, who has been a member of the district since 1989, manages includes 720 feet of tiles and 1.2 acres of grassed waterway. Woland maintains a rye cover crop which he chisels into corn ground.

What proves particularly challenging are the hills.

"There are hills all over," Woland said at a recent interview at his farm. "It's steep."

There are some fields with a 3-8 percent slope and others with slopes ranging from 8-15 percent. Woland believes one slope is as high as 23 percent — and he manages to get no-till corn on it with some good results.

David owns a combine in partnership with his brother, Donald, who works for Metal Industry.

David has been operating the grain farm all his life, but took over the operation from his parents, Elmer and Ethel Woland, in 1977. He lives at the home farm.

The farm was originally handed down from Ethel Woland's parents, Henry and Sarah Enders. Long ago, it used to have livestock, according to Ethel Woland. The farm was stocked with pigs, cattle, chickens, even a dozen cows.

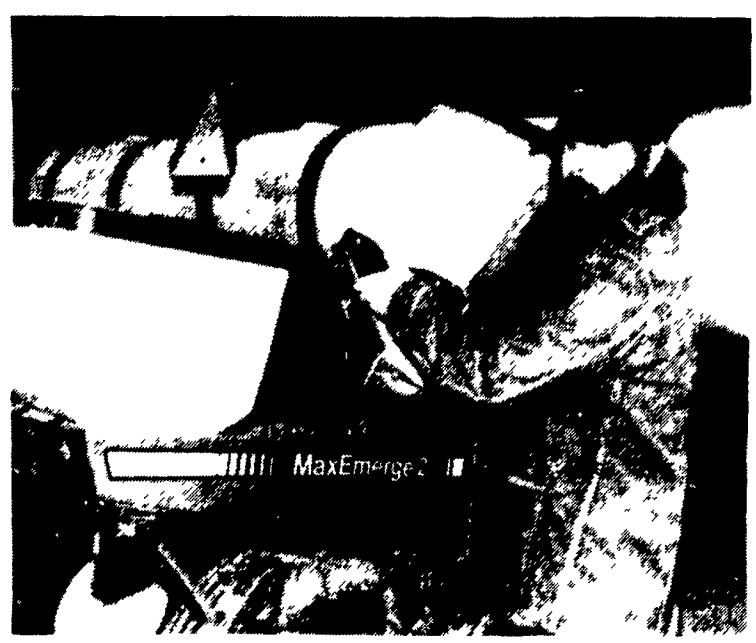
But by the late 1960s, the cows were gone, according to David. For a time, the farm raised hogs and some cattle until about 1980, when the Wolands switched to grain farming. In that time, David worked for the Speeces milk bottling company nearby.

Using a drill on some of the steeper ground proved a challenge. David's mother Ethel noted, "I hold my breath — I don't watch," she said. Here, Woland makes adjustments to a soybean drill planter.

The biggest problem encountered in the past was water collecting in some poor drainage areas. Tiles were installed in 1992 to take care of the problem, diverting rain water to waterways leading to the Armstrong Creek, which eventually flows into the Susquehanna River.

Contour strips were installed in 1992 as part of the conservation plan. There has been no continuous corn since the early 1980s. Woland admitted that they switched to a rotation because continuous corn didn't seem to work — it resulted in "low yields and poor weed control," Woland said.

The Wolands don't use any conventional plowing. The crops grown yield about 120 bushels per acre of corn, 40 of soybeans, and 55 of wheat, all sold on the open market.



The Wolands don't use any conventional plowing. The crops grown yield about 120 bushels per acre of corn, 40 of soybeans, and 55 of wheat, all sold on the open market. Woland gets ready for another corn planting season.

Last year, despite the drought, Woland had good corn crops, almost as good as 1996, he noted. They use no manure, but use a 7-21-7 starter on the crops.

The land under conservation plan is a Calvin-Leck Hill shaley silt loam.

Using a drill on some of the steeper ground proved a challenge. David's mother Ethel noted, "I hold my breath — I don't watch," she said.

"I think it's fun," said David with a laugh.

The combine levels off nicely even with the drastic slopes. For Woland, the big challenge is watching for groundhog holes, which can be hazardous to any planter, he noted.

The biggest weather challenges faced by the Wolands are those caused by drought. The land easily dries out can have an impact on yields.

But for the award, which Woland sees as a personal honor, Woland believes it was his work selling the idea of con-

No-Till Vegetable Producer Becomes Lancaster's Outstanding Cooperator

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MOUNT JOY (Lancaster Co.) — No-till vegetable pioneer Steve Groff "doesn't do things by the book," according to Gerald Heistand of the Lancaster County Conservation District.

As a matter of fact, noted Heistand, Groff "tries things not found in books."

After graduation from high school 16 years ago, Groff, who farms with his father Elias and family in Holtwood, learned how important it was, for farm survivability, to keep precious topsoil on the farm. In 1983, he rented a no-till planter from the county conservation district.

Since then, he hasn't looked back.

He's taken his "new generation farming" philosophy a couple of steps further — using a no-till vegetable transplanter and highlighting all kinds of no-till techniques at a wide array of field days at his Cedar Meadow Farm.

For his work in showcasing no-till and underlining the importance of conservation for farms regionwide, Groff was awarded the 1998 Outstanding Cooperator Award at the 47th Annual Lancaster County Conservation District Dinner Meeting. The Thursday night meeting was attended by more than 250 at the Country Table Restaurant in Mount Joy.

Heistand, director of agricultural operations for the district, narrated the story of Groff's no-till techniques at the vegetable and crop farms operated by the family in Martic Township. Heistand praised Groff's open-mindedness to new ideas and his willingness to experiment.

"If it's a new idea, it seems that Steve has tried it," Heistand said.

Moving to no-till cropping proved effective almost immediately in improving the soil. The Groffs added cover crops to further protect the soil.

Now, about 90 percent of the acreage is under cover crops — even the vegetable crops have a "living mulch" that conserves water, holds nutrients, and prevents soil erosion.

Some of the fields have not been touched by a plow for more than 15 years. Some fields have not been plowed for 30 years, because they were converted from pasture to cropland 10 years ago.

Over the 175 acres on two farms, pesticide savings alone have been phenomenal — 10 years ago the cost per acre for all pesticides ran to $32 an acre. Now, 10 years later, costs have dropped to $17 an acre.

The initial cost of cover crop seed and establishment is offset by the nitrogen contribution from legumes, soil held in place, and increased soil tilth, according to the district.

Steve Groff manages all field crops and Elias, his father, is in charge of marketing the produce and hay. Crops include 60 acres of corn, 50 acres in alfalfa/grass, 30 acres in vegetables, 20 acres in soybeans, and 15 acres in small grains. Elias raises about 70 steers on his farm per year.

To provide the necessary nitrogen, Steve has been using hairy vetch as a cover crop. A rolling stalk chopper rolls down the cover and vegetables are planted into the cover, "amidst a mat of residue," Heistand indicated. A no-till planter inserts different vegetable crops where planned.

The farm's techniques are so unique that a Public Broadcasting System TV documentary is under way. Farmers from as far away as Japan visit to see what the Groffs have been doing, Heistand noted. Hundreds of farmers have visited his various field days over the years, some covered extensively by this newspaper. And Steve maintains his own Internet website.

Also, the Lancaster County Conservation Expo is planned for July 29 at the Groff farm, according to Steve Groff.

"Steve's philosophy is that the soil is the lifeblood of the farm," said Heistand.

Ronald Meck of the district's board of directors said that Steve and Elias Groff are "men on a mission" to improve the condition of the soil.

In remarks to the guests, Steve said, "The soil is the most important asset we have under our control to manage," he noted, so that "my children and children of the future can make a good living from the soil."

Steve farms with his wife, Cheri, and their children Dana, 5, Lauren, 4, and David, 1 along with Steve's father, Elias and his wife, Marian.

Industry Awards

Also at the banquet, several industries were noted for their lasting contributions to soil conservation in the county.

Nevin Greiner, district resource conservationist, awarded the Conservation Award to the Building Industry to The Brickyard, a 65-acre tract in Ephrata Borough operated by Glen Gery Brick, which ceased operation in the late 1960s.

Eventually, the Windsor Development Corporation "acquired the vision to develop the property," noted Greiner. The borough worked with Windsor and agreed to a rezoning from industrial to high density and single family residential.

The complicated, steep property has more than 100 feet of elevation change in the tract. The slopes challenged the designer and excavator companies involved.

Through all phases of the project, according to the resource conservationist, a combination of erosion control matting and, to quote the contractor, "good weather" aided in the design of the slopes.

Some of the slop stabilization was performed by "creative and

York Extension Offers Beef Management Short Course

YORK (York Co.) – Penn State Cooperative Extension has developed a six week beef short course to be offered on Tuesday evenings, beginning on March 24th Most of the sessions will be conducted at the York County 4-H Center at Bair, PA. Sessions will be held from 7:30 - 9:30 PM. The York 4-H Center is located at 771 Stoverstown Road, just off Route 116 west of York.

The management short course will provide information for those just getting started in beef production or those who wish to increase their knowledge of beef production. Participants will learn the basics of beef husbandry through a combination of lectures, panel discussions, farm visits and an on-foot, on-rail beef carcass evaluation session.

Pre-registration for the short course is requested in advance to the York Extension Office at (717) 840-7408. Enrollment fee is $30 to cover the cost of printed materials, demonstrations and refreshments.

The introductory session on March 24th will address the beef industry in Pennsylvania, breeds of beef cattle and keeping and evaluating beef production and financial records. Extension Agent Tim Beck will present information at the opening session.

Dr. Mike O'Conner, Extension Specialist, Reproductive Management from Penn State's Dairy and Animal Science Department will be the featured speaker for the March 31st session. Topics to be addressed include: heat detection alternatives, timed breeding programs, use of artificial insemination with beef cattle, using artificial insemination with heifers and the relationship of body condition score to breeding efficiency.

The third session will focus on beef health issues. Dr. David Wolfgang, D.V.M., field investigator with PSU's Veterinary Science Department will speak on important beef health issues including; vaccination programs for the beef cow/calf producer, biosecurity for beef operations, health programs for receiving feeder cattle and topical anatomy of the beef animal.

Extension Agronomist John Rowehl will discuss pasture and forage management issues at the April 14th session. This will include forage establishment and maintenance, pasture grazing management practices, weed control and forage species characteristics. Agent Tim Beck will address beef nutrition with emphasis on evaluating forage quality and planning feeding programs for the cow/calf operation and the stocker grazing operation.

On April 21st, the group will take farm tours to Wayne Hoffman's beef finishing operation in the Dover area and to South Branch Farms to tour a purebred Angus beef cow/calf operation.

District To Honor Conservation Leaders At Banquet

DAUPHIN (Dauphin Co.) — Individuals, families, and organizations are cordially invited to attend the Dauphin County Conservation District's Annual Awards Banquet.

On Thursday, April 2, the District will honor persons and/or groups for their outstanding contributions to the conservation of our natural resources. Ed Wytovich will be recognized as the 1997 Conservation Educator of the Year, David Woland will receive the Conservation Farmer of the Year Award, and the Milton Hershey School will receive a Special Recognition Award for Conservation Awareness.

Entertainment for the evening will be the renowned "Living History" interpreter, Richard N. Pawling. Pawling will reprise his new characterization of Jack Hains, 1890's Logger, entitled "Shays, Peaveys and Woodhicks: Early Logging Days."

Pawling is a professor of Cultural Geography at Penn State. He has worked for many years as a ranger at Hopewell Furnace National Historic Site. Described as "something of an educator, historian and entertainer," he depicts characters from the regions past in very accurate and intriguing renditions, dressing as they dressed, speaking as they spoke. His recreations of historical events and individuals has won him national recognition, including the "1995 Excellence in Interpretation" award. Many remember Pawling from 1995 when he did more than 220 performances of "Legends of the Backwoods" as part of the Pennsylvania Game Commision's 100th Anniversary.

This event will begin at 6:30 p.m. with a buffet dinner of turkey and ham in the auditorium of the Dauphin County Agriculture and Natural Resources Center. The center is located at 1451 Peters Mountain Road, two miles north of Dauphin Borough on Route 225 between Clarks Creek and Peters Mountain. Tickets are available from the Dauphin County Conservation District. The cost of the tickets is $12.50 for adults, $6 for children ages 3-8 years old, and free for children under 3 years old. Ticket deadline is March 25. All money is due by this date and any cancellations after March 25 will not be refunded.

For more information about the banquet, call (717) 921-8100.

servation farming with no-till that caught the eye of the judges. He has demonstrated no-tilling for a lot of his customers, and a great deal of them have switched over completely to no-till.

Also, he has seen direct and positive results after using no-till on his farm. The soil stays in place. He also uses a dense residue cover, especially with the wheat crop, which keeps residue at 60-70 percent on the field.

Taking A Lesson From The Dutch

Dr. William B. Roush
Assoociate Professor of Poultry Science
Department of Poultry Science

Telephone: 814-863-0655

Nutrient management is of increasing concern as legislation is developed to govern the amount of excess nutrients, such an nitrogen and phosphorus, in the environment. Feed formulation is a critical control point for nutrient management.

This last summer, I had the opportunity to observe how Dutch nutritionists formulate feed to confront the problem of nutrient management. Coupled with our research on nonlinear programming, which deals with nutrient variability in feed ingredients, a managed approach to feed formulation can be implemented to reduce the amounts of excess nutrients going into the environment.

A typical Dutch approach to feed formulation for nutrient management is to set maximums on protein and total phosphorus to reduce environmental excesses and to set minimums on digestible amino acids and available phosphorus to meet the nutrient requirements of the animal. The result strikes a balance between reducing waste nutrients to the environment and meeting the nutrient requirements of the animal.

Penn State research has shown stochastic nonlinear programming accurately guarantees nutrient levels while reducing variability and excess nutrients (Roush et al., 1996, J. Appl. Poultry Research 5:16). As a part of our study, Fushan Zhang, a Ph.D candidate in Animal Science and Operations Research, formulated rations by stochastic programming and linear programming. These rations were compared for their ability to meet nutrient requirements at the same requested level of probability while minimizing excess nutrients.

In the first series of rations, linear and stochastic programmed rations (LP50 and SP50) were compared at a requested maximum level of 21% with a 50% probability of meeting the nutrient requirement. A second series of rations, which included a margin of safety for protein (LP69 and SP69), were formulated for a maximum of 21% protein and a requested 69% probability. A third series of rations (LP69-AA and SP69-AA) were formulated with a 69% margin of safety for both protein and amino acids, at a requested maximum crude protein level of 21% and minimum on digestible amino acids (methionine, total sulfur amino acids, lysine, threonine and tryptophan).

The stochastic ration had reduced levels of amino acids. The difference in crude protein for both SP69 versus LP69 and LP69-AA versus SP69-AA was .2 percentage points. SP69-AA as compared to LP69-AA, had lower calculated levels for digestible amino acids including methionine, total sulfur amino acids, lysine, threonine and tryptophan for a difference of .016, .010, .012, .038, and .005 percentage points, respectively.

As expected from earlier research, there was no difference in the cost of the rations at a requested probability of 50%. At a requested probability of 69%, there was a lowering of cost in favor of stochastic formulated rations for both the protein and the protein/amino acid formulations.

The nutrient and cost differences between stochastic and linear programmed rations were small as compared to linear programming. However, it must be kept in mind that when rations are formulated, recipes of ingredient amounts are produced. That is, discrete or fixed amounts of ingredients mixed at the feed mill. So the differences are real and consistent between the two approaches to ration formulation.

This formulation research suggests that the Dutch approach of minimizing total nutrients while maximizing digestible nutrients in conjunction with a nonlinear program would, over time, consistently reduce excess nutrients in the environment.

Somerset Holstein Club Elects Directors

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

BERLIN (Somerset Co.) – Three directors were elected at the annual banquet of the Somerset County Holstein Club. They are Dan Carr, Somerset, Jeff Hillegass, Berlin and Ben Miller from Boswell.

Each will serve a three-year term, joining directors John Fox, Rockwood; Cheryl Glessner, Berlin; Mark Ream, Markleton, whose terms end next year, and Mert Maust, Meyersdale: Willis Sharp, Stoystown and Jeff Smiley, Berlin, whose terms expire in the year 2000.

Outgoing president, Willard Maust, Meyersdale, who 40 years ago, for $25 purchased a lifetime membership in the National Holstein Association, closed his 6-year directorship with some important words.

"I found the directors over the years, a group of individuals with goals " Maust said, listing three: provement of cattle; promotion of Somerset County clubs' activities and being great people to work with.

"I consider classification, official testing, and positive identification very important to breed solid cattle with longevity for profitable production," he concluded.

John Fox emphasized in his sale report from the 1997 Fall Classic: "It's very important that Somerset County Holstein breeders support the sale as consignors and buyers."

He had an example of Holstein pride to share about a cow sold at the 1994 Somerset sale which, in 1997, was a national milk leader.

VG-86 Blackstar daughter, national junior 4-year-old production leader with 305-day lactation at four years, two months, made 49,405 pounds of milk; 1,646 pounds of protein and 1,702 pounds of fat.

Mark Ream touted the quality of shows in Somerset County as such that even an international judge like Robert Morrell, without batting an eye, will accept an invitation to come here and do a show.

Ream gave the Futurity — new in 1997 — report.

Directors of the Somerset County Holstein Club are, front, 1-r past president, Willard Maust, John Fox, Jeff Smiley, Mert Maust. Back, Cheryl Glessner, Mark Rean, Jeff Hillegass, Dan Carr and Willie Sharp. Ben Miller was absent.

Paul Countryman gave the nominating committee report and Mike Carr, the financial report.

Ken Raney executive director used a slide presentation in his Pennsylvania Holstein Association report, which showcased international shipment of Holstein animals and other livestock from Pennsylvania.

His recommendation to farmers concerned farm signs for identification purposes. When he needs to visit them it is very helpful, at arrival, to see a farm sign, he said.

Ella Maust and Marie Countryman, it was announced, combined their talents to make a quilt which, at the Pennsylvania Holstein Convention, recently, was given as a door prize.

Designing the bed cover and piecing it together was Ella's role. She put a pretty Holstein girl's face smack in the center, and bedecked it with yellow sunflowers.

Then Marie quilted the 90 by 108 inch prize.

A brief address was give by Somerset County dairy princess, Jessica Lynch.

Dr. Robert Bastain was master of ceremonies. His experiences in veterinary medicine supplied some anecdotes that he shared with the group.

Sand Springs Bluegrass band entertained everyone.

Marie Countryman, left,and Ella Maust combined their talents to make the double-size quilt given away recently at the state Holstein Convention held in Greensburg.

imaginative builders," said Greiner.

Now the Brickyard contains townhouses and single family units.

Recognized were key groups, including Ephrata Borough, represented by Leanne Biers; Windsor Services Development Corp., represented by John Kibblehouse; Derck and Edson, Associates, represented by Grant Smith; H.L. Wiker Excavating, represented by Harold Wiker; Andrews Excavating, represented by L. Burnell Andrews; and Hurst Excavating, represented by Darnell Hurst.

Don Robinson, district administrator, presented the Industry Conservation Service Award to Warner Lambert, Lititz, as a "fine example of industry management and their role in protecting the environment." The award was accepted by Cindy Brandt and Lynn Shafer.

Individual Honors

In 1994, according to Robinson, the district entered into a partnership agreement with the Donegal Fish and Conservation Association to work in the stream corridor to improve fish habitat. About seven miles of stream have been fenced and improved and trees planted. The final touches will be added this summer, he said.

The district nominated the association for the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts Watershed Association Awards, which they won and received recognition last fall.

Three individuals were honored with the Watershed Award for, according to Robinson, their "personal time and expertise in a most unselfish and dedicated manner."

They are:

• Don Kelly, Donegal Fish and Conservation Association's official limnologist (a person who studies the aquatic resources and aquatic life that abides within). Kelly monitors the creek periodically and averages 30 hours a month of volunteer time, keeping himself busy with monitoring the health of the Donegal, Robinson noted.

• Tom Moore, treasurer of the Donegal Fish and Conservation Association and the Donegal Creek Restoration Project coordinator. Through Moore's efforts, noted Robinson, more than $17,000 has been donated to the project from outside sources.

• Ken DePoe, founder and president of the Donegal Fish and Conservation Association and founder of the Donegal Chapter of Trout Unlimited. "Ken lives and breathes environmental stewardship and his integrity in this area has influenced many young people," said Robinson.

DePoe presented a merit award to Mark Metzler for his work on the Donegal Watershed Restoration Project.

Robinson also presented the Agency Award to Raeann Schatz, program assistant in the Farm Service Agency (FSA) office.

Robinson said, "Her helpful, knowledgeable, and friendly assistance to customers, partner agency staff, and county committee members is exemplary."

Schatz came to work with ASCS (now FSA) in August 1977. In June 1988, she was one of the recipients of the USDA's Administrators Award for Service to Agriculture for her work with the RCWP Project.

Robert Wagner, chairman of the conservation district board, presented the Service Award to Herbert N. Myer, district associate director, for his "innovative work with slit tillage," according to Wagner. The work "has led to the acceptance of this excellent management practice to conserve soil and water."

Myer was appointed by the Lancaster County commissioners to the board of directors beginning Jan. 1, 1986. With his farming background, said Wagner, Myer brought a "wealth of experience with him to help him serve as a farm director."

Robert Lauffer, vice chairman of the district board of directors and ag science teacher at Garden Spot High School, presented a special educator award for his mentor, Dr. Phil Ogline, retired ag teacher at Garden Spot. Lauffer noted that Ogline influenced "thousands of students" at Garden Spot, many of whom, as a result, are involved in ag-related careers.

Chotty Sprenkle, district environmental education coordinator, presented an educator award to Dr. Arba Henry, lead ag teacher at Solanco High School, whose career spans more than 27 years. He was honored from Octorara Creek stream stabilization efforts and conservation education.

Sprenkle presented Youth Conservation School awards to Helen and Roy Rudy, Lititz, for 20 years of dedication to the school.

Additional awards included the Watershed Conservation Award to the Donegal Fish and Conservation Association and a special Agency Award went to Raeann Schatz. From left, Tom Moore, Ken DePoe, and Don Kelly of the association and, in front, Raeann Schatz.

THE CORN HERBICIDE NAMED FOR HOW IT WORKS.

FulTime™ HERBICIDE

Farmers who use it say FulTime™ herbicide is the most effective premix for grass and broadleaf weed control. Even in heavy residue no-till and reduced-till fields. It only requires 1/4" of moisture for activation. And FulTime can be applied weeks before planting. The encapsulated acetochlor gives full-season, timed-release control of grasses as well as small-seeded broadleaf weeds, including resistant lambsquarters, waterhemp and pigweed. The atrazine provides burndown and added performance on large-seeded broadleaf weeds. Ask your full-service crop protection dealer/applicator for FulTime. Or call our Information Hotline at 1-800-759-2500.

Many of author Linda Oatman High's story ideas are derived from her own childhood and those of her sons'.

Linda Oatman High holds a copy of her new book, "Beekeepers," to add to the many delightful books she has written for children.

Author's New Book Captures Beekeeping Story

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

BOWMANSVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — When the word "bees" is mentioned, most children shiver with the memory of a bee sting. But when Linda Oatman High hears the word, she thinks of honey and beekeepers hanging tough, plugging away at their ancient art with grit and guts, spunk and pluck.

She wants others to share her concept of beekeepers.

"Beekeepers are some of the most dedicated folks I know," High said. "These gatherers of honey are zealous and committed. Beekeeping isn't just a profession; it's a way of life, requiring heaps of patience, devotion, and true love."

A much-loved writer of children's stories, High shares her perspective in a book she's written called "Beekeepers."

High has a sparse, poetic style that enables children and adults to feel part of the action. She writes, "Springtime sunshine pours like warm honey from the sky. . . .

"Standing still, I hardly dare to breathe as the bees twirl down like a tornado, swirling and whirling every which way above Grandpa and me, the clustering on the branch of a tree."

With muted illustrations, artist Doug Chayka shows the beekeeper's garb and beehives to give readers a realistic picture of what happens when a swarm of bees is brought down from a tree limb and moved into a hive.

High wrote the book from watching neighbor Bob Hughes who operates Rainbow Apiaries.

"I wrote a fiction book sprinkled with beekeeping facts, wishing to entertain and inform in a way that's easy for children to understand," High said. The book tells of a granddaughter who becomes "a fine keeper of bees," under his grandfather's watchful eye.

"It is my wish that the book will open the eyes of girls and boys to the many joys of puttering in backyard beehives so that beekeeping doesn't fade away in the technoage of the future."

Other books by High include "A Christmas Star," which was heralded by the "New York Times" as one of the 13 best Christmas books for children.

"Maizie," "Hound Heaven," and "The Summer of the Great Divide."

High has written a column for Tri-County newspaper for 15 years. A collection of those columns is published in book form as "Hogwash, History, and Horse Sense."

Although all her other books have had national publishers, the collection of columns was published by a fan of her columns. "Jake's View," is a wise, humorous column on local heritage and its people.

High has been published in numerous newspapers, magazines, and has had several children's books published. Three more books are under contract. High said that it usually takes three years after a contract is signed until the book is in print.

High said her ideas for books are often sparked by memories of her childhood and from her own children. She, her husband and three sons live in Bowmansville where they are renovating a house from old barn wood. Her husband dismantles old barns. In fact, High has written a picture book about his vocation in her book, "Barn Savers."

High's interest in writing developed when her 11th grade teacher, Mrs. Susan Severs at Garden Spot High School, encouraged High's creative writing.

High married young and did not attend college, but her love for writing increased. She said, "I love writing so much, I don't need to displine myself to set aside time to do it."

However, responsibilities of mothering and pursuing other interests often limit her writing time to when the children are in school.

As many mothers, High laments that her children do not read more books, but she said, "I tell the kids they must read my books."

They do.

"My books usually have a theme that lift up values such as faith, love, and hope," High said.

Her first book "Maizie," is a novel for 8-14 years old and tells of a girl and her wishes for a pony. "It's based on my observation of living near the people of Welsh Mountain and seeing how we're all the same inside, with wishes and hopes and dreams that may or may not come true," High said.

"Hound Heaven," about a girl who wants a dog, was nominated for state book awards in Illinois and Oklahoma.

"A Stone's Throw From Paradise" is a fictional setting of an Amish town called Pearly Gates, a stone's throw from Paradise. "The story is based on my husband's grandmother, who is Amish," High said.

"The Summer of the Great Divide," has a 1969 setting with the backdrop of the Vietnam War. It's the story of a young girl whose parents are getting a divorce, and she spends a summer at the farm with her cousin who she can't stand. "I try to incorporate some American history with the division caused by the Vietnam War between generations and man's first walk on the moon.

High would like to branch out into writing adult novels, nonfictional books, poetry, and song writing.

"I did some song writing as a kid and now I'm getting back into it," she said. She is also learning to play the drums along with her teenage sons.

Every novel that she has written has been published. Breaking in the first time was the most difficult. High submitted her manuscript to 13 publishers before it was accepted.

With the release of several new books, High is asked more and more to cover public speaking events. "I like it, but it's draining from creativity," she said. She said some out-of-state appearances can be sychronized with family vacations.

"I love writing so much that I'd do it even if I wasn't paid. But it's exciting to do something creative that affects others' lives and make money doing it," High said.

Unlike many oft-published writers, High does not have an agent to represent her. She represents herself by making trips to New York to visit publishers. "My writing stands on its own," she said.

The hard-cover picture book, "Beekeepers," written for children from 5-8, is distributed by Boyds Mills Press and, along with High's other published books are available in bookstores nationwide.

Children and Homework Hassles

Just a few months remain in the school year and the enthusiasm that our children had for school work is fading fast. As parents many of us may be beginning to become more frustrated when it comes to helping our children with their homework. If this is occuring in your household, then it may be time to rethink our role in homework and to learn how to approach it with our children.

Remember that homework is given to students to reinforce the learning that has taken place at school. It also helps students to develop a sense of discipline and organization. At this time of year, parents may be nagging their children to get their homework done, which doesn't encourage discipline development or a love of learning.

How can parents solve this problem? A Cooperative Extension specialist from New Mexico, Diane DelCampo, has provided the following suggestions for helping children with homework and ways for parents to approach this important task more positively:

• Schedule a consistent daily quiet time for children to work on their homework. Together decide on a time period that would work for your family. Depending on the age of the children and the amount of homework received, the length of time will vary. If your children have no homework or finish before the time is up, encourage your children to spend some quiet time reading. Parents can read also to model this behavior. If a favorite television program comes on during the homework time, tape it and watch it later, or change the homework time. The family homework routine should be created to be flexible, so that it would work for the children and you.

• Assist children with one or two examples, but don't help with every homework question. If the homework is completed accurately, you know that they have learned the material. When a parent helps with every question, you may not know if your children truly understand and can do it on their own. Children who continue to be frustrated and dependent on parents to complete their homework, may not understand what is expected.

• Help children organize a time frame for long and difficult projects. Establishing short-term deadlines for different parts of the project, either over a period of days or during the course of an evening. If the project is a one night deal, work early in the evening, and schedule homework breaks. This will help children to pace themselves, according to their capabilities.

• Reduce stress in your children's lives as much as possible. Many times our children may be involved in lots of extracurricular activities. This may lead to tired and distracted children, who are burned out. Take a look at your schedule and work toward a balanced one, which will allow our children to complete their homework, as well as time to relax and play.

• Recognize the limits of your patience. If homework hassles are affecting your family life and are a constant irritation, think about hiring a tutor. Even an older student in your neighborhood, who likes to work with children, can perform this role. This may help ease the relationship between you and your children, as well as help your children do better in school.

• Use a non-threatening approach to homework. When children make mistakes in their homework, ask them how they got the answer. Often when children attempt to explain this, they will discover their mistake and make appropriate corrections. This technique is more effective than giving your children the right answer.

• Support the teacher. If you see a problem with the homework, communicate this either through a note or an appointment with the teacher. Complaining about the teacher only encourages your children to question the teacher's competence and authority.

When homework is considered part of your family's daily routine, and is handled positively and honestly, both parents and children can appreciate its usefulness beyond the letter grade that is received on their report cards. Homework then will become less of a family issue and not a power struggle between parent and children.

Newsletter Helps Parents Stay On Target

NEWARK, Del. – Cuddled in his mother's lap, one-year-old Ian contentedly studies the pages of a colorful picture book. But not for long. With a determined wiggle, he squirms to the floor and toddles about the family room under his mother's attentive eye.

Shari Miller, like any new parent, wants to be sure her child is growing and developing normally. But as a working mother settling into a new home, her spare time is limited. Juggling work and family demands, she doesn't have much chance to sit down and read books on child development.

Luckily for Miller – and for many other Delaware parents – help comes regularly in the mailbox in the form of "Great Beginnings," a University of Delaware Cooperative Extension newsletter series geared to her son's age.

"I like it because it's concise," says the Newark resident. "I can see immediately if his developmental skills are on track."

While "Great Beginnings" allows her to check that her son is reaching developmental milestones on schedule, Miller also can get ideas for easy homemade toys, learn effective methods of discipline and find out where to seek help if it's needed.

"It's a great refresher," says Miller, who is certified to teach elementary education. "I often use the ideas for activities and share them with my mom when she babysits. Last week, I used the tip of letting Ian play with pots and lids from the kitchen. I was amazed at how long it kept him occupied."

"Great Beginnings" is mailed each month from a child's birth to 36 months, and each issue contains information specific to the age. For instance, the 13-month issue Miller just received offers research on children's fears, tips on weaning the child from the bottle or breast and suggestions on how frustrated parents can take time out away from their children.

A subscription to 'Great Beginnings" costs $7 for one year, $13 for two years, and $20 for three years. The fee may be waived in cases of financial hardship. For more information, call (302)831-1328.

Spring came.

Did ya' notice?

Good grief. What a goofy year. Makes one wide-eyed-curious about what the next months might bring, weatherwise.

My calf nursery sink spigots froze up for the first time. Last week. That usually happens at least once or twice during winter's worst, normally through some mid-January, week-long stretch of near-zero nights, with a hefty wind blowing. The sink is in the northwest corner of the calf nursery, where the wind roars between the barns with all the subtlety of a wind tunnel. But, it's rarely a problem in March.

Normally — meaning most years, but not this one — we keep a poultry-brooder type light under there all winter. A single, hundred-watt bulb gives off enough heat in that confined, metal and concrete space to keep the pipes from freezing. On really, really cold nights, with heavy winds, I'll lay a couple of heavy paper calf-feed bags over the top of the sink as additional insulation.

So when I bumped the light and the bulb died several weeks ago, it was no big deal. Why waste the electric when it was so naturally warm and no danger of the pipes freezing? All it was accomplishing was to keep my bottle of liquid detergent from getting too chilled and thick to squirt out easily when I squeezed the bottle. Diluting the stuff with water accomplished the same purpose.

After having to haul hot water up from the dairy barn to toss around the underside of the sink to thaw pipes last week, a new light bulb went under the sink that every day.

The same night the calf nursery spigot froze, so did the daffodils. (And the fruit tree buds.) It was nearly bedtime when I remembered the clump of daffodils at the corner of the house that had opened blooms a day earlier, creamy-white blossoms with ruffly, pale-yellow centers. Snagging a paring knife from the kitchen, I made a hasty dish from the edge of the porch into the bitter night.

Too late. The stems and some of the blossoms were already rigid with internal ice. I lopped off the blooms and carried them inside anyway, plunking them into a small vase filled with room-temperature water. By morning, some had perked up. Two mornings later, most of them looked as fresh as if they had just opened. Apparently hypothermia hadn't quite set in completely. A few remaining outside, which I missed in the shadowy dark (and being in a big hurry), didn't fare so well and looked plenty droopy in the sunshine a few days later.

None of these extremes, however, has bothered the potted bulbs for forcing, tucked safely into boxes filled with insulating leaves and left to chill out. Or in the case of a box or two, left out to chill. Hyacinths, daffodils, tulips, all have been recently unearthed from hibernation and relocated to the cool greenhouse floor to green-up their foliage and push buds. And, once again, some of 'em got ahead of me. A couple of pots of tulips were uncovered sporting spindly, yellowed foliage poked up through the leaf-insulation in desperate search of daylight.

They knew it was spring. Even if we arent' so sure.

In a year which has seen New England's electrical grid crashed under ice, houses on both coasts slip-sliding into the oceans, dairy barns in New Mexico's deserts collapsing under snow, cattle dead in feedlots behind Plains states blizzards, and Florida about to float away, a frozen pipe in March and droopy daffodils are just no big deal.

Come to think about it, how many months of March do we get that aren't goofy? And, would that make El Nino currently normal?

Now there's a sobering thought.

STARTING VEGETABLE TRANSPLANTS INDOORS

Vegetable growers starting their own vegetable transplants need to follow four steps: choose the proper seeding date, choose a potting soil or mix, know your plant's light requirements, and last but not least, what temperature do transplants require.

Transplants are often started from seed far too early. Twelve to fourteen weeks before the ideal planting date is way too long. Most vegetables only require four to six weeks. Tomatoes and eggplant require six to eight weeks. Plants sowed too early outgrow the cell pak container. As a result, two undesirable conditions occur, plants that are potbound with the roots throughout plus completely encircling the outer edge of the potting soil in the cell pak. This causes tops to become spindly and weak due to crowded competition for light.

Here's an example. It's safe to set out tomato plants in our area about May 10. Then your tomato seeds should be sown 1/4" deep in the containers about the last week of March. This will provide a young, actively growing transplant, not yet overcrowded in the container and with a rootball still expanding and growing downward.

For starting seeds indoors, avoid using soil from the garden. In its place, use a lightweight "artificial soil" that is uniform and already sterilized. Commercially prepared soilless mixes consists of peat moss, vermiculite, perlite, and pine bark. They are lightweight, free from plant pests, including soil borne diseases, nematodes and insects, and drain very well. The result is far superior to your own sterilized garden soil when placed in cell paks.

Homegrown or windowsill transplants often do poorly because of poor light. What's wrong with the light coming through my window? Unless you're raising transplants in a solar room with overhead sunlight or a greenhouse, chances are your window light, except for brief periods on sunny days, is too shady. In late winter and early spring we generally have a low percentage of sunny days in succession. Most are cloudy: many are rainy. Light from cloudy days coming through a window does not grow stock vegetable transplants!

To do a better job, use fluorescent lights places about 12" above the seeding tray. The lights should be on a timer to provide 16 hours of bright light each 24 hour period. Dual fluorescent tubes provide a stronger and more uniform light intensity than does a single tube. One cool white and one warm white fluorescent tube provide an excellent balance of usable light for seedling plants. If you prefer, you may use special fluorescent tubes developed for growing plants which have a pink or purple cast of light emittance. Research indicates that a mixture of warm and cool white fluorescent tubes is just as good.

As plants sprout and grow under these lights, the tubes may be raised so as not to produce too much heat too near the tops of the plants. Our experience indicates a 12" height from plant top to fluorescent tube is entirely satisfactory on vegetable seedlings ranging from asparagus to watermelons!

Fluorescent tubes emit a lot of heat. To compensate for this warmth, keep plants growing on the cool side to promote stocky versus succulent growth. For the best results, turn off or turn down all other heat in the room to 55 degrees F. A cool basement is an excellent area for starting plants under lights. Avoid a warm room with its own heat source. Normal air temperatures in the 70's provides too warm an environment for seedling flats with lights.

The only exception to this rule is for the germination process. Temperature requirements for germination are quite different from "growing on" temperatures. For example, vegetable seed catalogs suggest a germination temperature at 80 degrees F., whereas a growing on temperature after seed sprouting at 60-70 degrees. After using 80 degrees F for germination, the cooler 60 degrees is preferable to 70 degrees for growing out most vegetable transplants to keep them stocky and healthy.

Better Kid Care

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.) — Penn State Cooperative Extension's Better Kid Care course for child care providers continues at the Government Services Center, Suite 370, 601 Westtown Road, West Chester, on Thursday, April 2, 7 - 9 p.m. the focus of this program will be "Using Art Materials."

Learn the difference between art and crafts and the different roles they play in child development. Identify how children progress developmentally in their abilities to use art materials, including fluid media. The child view versus the adult view of art will be discussed, along with how to effectively communicate with children about their artwork.

Penn State specialists join the discussion via satellite. On-site activities will be conducted by Becky Scotland, Chester County Extension's Family Living Assistant, and Trudy Dougherty, CFCS, Extension Home Economist. The registration fee, due no later than March 26, is $5. For further information, contact the Extension office at (610) 696-3500.

Add Fiber To Your Diet

Fiber, bulk, and roughage all refer to the part of a plant that can't be digested by humans. Daily intake of high fiber foods can help in weight control as well as the prevention of heart disease. Too little fiber in the diet may result in constipation and intestinal disorders.

Too much bran or fiber can prevent the absorption of some vitamins and minerals.

All fiber is not the same. Insoluble fiber is found in wheat bran, vegetables, and whole grain cereals, and soluble fiber is found in oat bran, barley, dried beans, and fruit. Each plays an important but slightly different role in your body.

Insoluble fiber add bulk to the diet. They absorb water as they go through the digestive tract and help to decrease the time it takes for waste to move out of the body. Insoluble fiber helps to prevent constipation, diverticulitis, spastic colon, and irritable bowel syndrome. They may also dilute some cancer causing agents and decrease their contact with the intestinal wall.

Soluble fiber may aid in the treatment of diabetes and high blood cholesterol. Soluble fiber may help diabetics by slowing absorption of sugar after a meal as well as by lowering fat levels in the blood. Soluble fiber helps people with high blood cholestrol by trapping bile salts, which contain cholesterol, and carrying them out of the body. This is just one dietary factor that may reduce total blood cholesterol.

The American Dietetic Association recommends people consume 20-35 grams of fiber daily, but most people consume only 10 to 20 grams daily.

To add more fiber to your diet, try the following:

- Eat a variety of high fiber foods such as fruits, vegetables, whole grain breads, cereals, oat bran, and legumes.
- Eat the whole fruit in place of drinking fruit juice.
- Add more dried beans and peas to your diet.
- Remember that fiber absorbs water. Dietary fiber without water can result in constipation and hard dry stools.
- Eat the skin of fresh fruits and vegetables.
- When a recipe calls for 1 cup flour, substitute ⅔ cup white flour and ⅓ cup oat bran or whole wheat flour.
- Start your day by eating a breakfast cereal that contains at least 5 grams of fiber per serving.

Add high fiber foods gradually to your diet.

Remember, fiber comes only from plant foods, never meats.

March is nutrition month. For this reason the focus of many workshops and events are being held this month teach people how to incorporate healthy eating into their lifestyle.

This week, two nutritional events covered in this section include the workshop taught by Marlene Nash, R.D., and the Nutrition Fair planned by Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program (EFNEP). Although the Nutrition Fair is on the kid's page because it highlights the kids events, the fair included many adult activities to teach parents the importance of diet in the health of families.

Brenda Stallman, EFNEP adviser, told participants that getting children to eat the recommended five servings a day of fruits and vegetables is easier than you think. She handed out many recipes and information sheets. Here is one to warm tummies on a cold, dreary day.

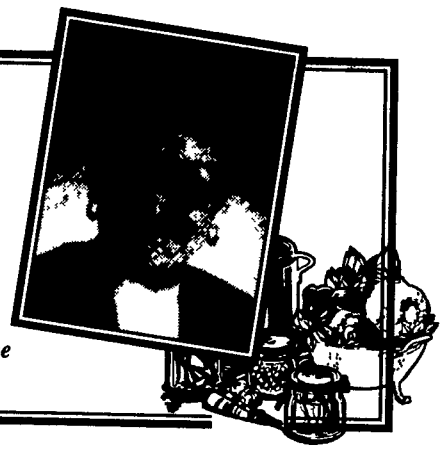
Consuming Thoughts

by

Fay Strickler

Penn State Extension Home Economist For Berks Co.



As American palettes are exposed to more foods of other cultures, rice is becoming an increasingly important part of the American diet. Many common Asian, Spanish, Indian, Mexican, and Cajun dishes call for rice.

As a result, the rice cooker, a common appliance in Korea, China, and Japan, and other Asian countries is now becoming more popular with American consumers because it is convenient and it can consistently produce perfect fluffy rice, without scorching or becoming soggy or dry.

The three-cup cooker is the best seller, followed by the seven-cup capacity version. Cooker prices range from $19.99 for basic model to $69.95 for moderate ones to several hundred dollar models. Cool-touch sides for safety and nonstick surfaces for easy clean-up are important at all price levels. At the higher prices, performance features may include fuzzy-logic computerization with timers, automatic on and off settings to keep rice warm for hours after cooking, and options such as steam trays and egg poachers.

Before you decide to purchase the higher-priced model, consider how often you will use the features and whether it really is worth spending the extra money. It's also important to consider if you have a place to store another appliance.

Cooking with rice is an excellent way to stretch your food dollars. Using rice will help you prepare economical dishes that are still delicious and nutritious. Rice is free of cholesterol, fat and sodium, but rich in complex carbohydrates, the perfect choice for quick to fix recipes at any meal.

Uncooked white rice can be stored on a shelf and is ready to use with no washing, peeling, or chopping. Once opened, rice should be stored in an airtight container. Cooked rice may be stored in the refrigerator in an airtight container for up to one week or in the freezer for six months.

Get into the healthy habit of cooking double batches of rice. With extra rice on hand you can easily put together quick stir fries, hot or cold salads, casseroles and desserts.

Liven up rice with these quick tips:

•Add flavor to rice by cooking rice in chicken, beef, or vegetable broth.

•Make an elegant salad by tossing cool rice with marinated artichoke hearts, Italian dressing, and Parmesan cheese.

•Serve grilled chicken with hot rice tossed with sautéed onion and snipped fresh cilantro.

•Create a quick fried rice by sautéing chopped ginger, green onions, and bacon; add cooked rice and a splash of soy sauce.

•Stir sautéed red or green pepper strips and garlic into hot rice cooked in chicken broth.

•Toss cool rice with fresh fruits and ham; serve with a honey/yogurt dressing for a cool summer salad.

•Cook rice in chicken broth, the juice of one lemon, one clove of minced garlic and a pinch of pepper. Garnish with snipped fresh parsley.

Turkey Waldorf Salad

- 1 cup cooked rice (cooked in chicken broth), cooled
- 1 cup cooked turkey breast strips
- 3/4 cup diced unpeeled apple
- 1/2 cup sliced celery
- 2 Tbs. slivered almonds, toasted
- 3 Tbs. bottled poppy seed salad dressing
- Lettuce leaves

Combine all ingredients except lettuce in medium bowl. Serve on lettuce leaves. Makes 2 servings. Per serving: 380 calories, 25.1 g protein, 15.7 g fat, 33.8 g carbohydrate, 657 mg. sodium, 49 mg. cholesterol.

Macadamia Nut Squares

1 cup flour

Remove from oven and cover with a mixture of eggs, coconuts, 2 tablespoons flour, brown sugar, baking powder, salt, vanilla, and chopped nuts. Continue baking for 20 minutes. Remove from oven and cool. When cool, spread with a mixture of the 2 tablespoons butter, powdered sugar, orange juice, and lemon juice. Sprinkle ground nuts over top. Cut in small squares. Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

We were always told to have our sugar peas planted by St. Patrick's Day, but I don't think we will unless it stops raining. The soil is too wet to rototill. Although, my husband bought a brand new big rototiller that he is anxious to use, I tell him that it is too big for him to handle. Of course, he does not agree.

He has tackled some very big jobs this winter. To me, our meadow looks like a disaster area. Big trees have been cut down and he has some 30 logs for sale. The ash and hickory are 25 feet long and three and four feet across. When they fell, they broke limbs off nearby trees. There will be firewood to sell and brush to burn. Eventually, I am hoping for a nice meadow to look at again.

There are cabbage, broccoli, and soon some tomato plants in the basement under lights. Each plant is in a separate pot that Allen made out of newspaper. This should make it easier to transplant them.

My daughters gave me gift certificates from a seed catalog as Christmas gifts. So, I was able to order lots and lots of flowers. The problem will be to start them from seed as often they do not sprout for me.

Lately, my high school class has been meeting every other month for lunch. At one time only small groups got together but now the whole class is included. We find that our interests are more common now that we are retired. Health is a common denominator and so are our families. Travel is always a subject for conversation together with hobbies. Naturally, the group is continually growing smaller but we will enjoy it while we can.

Clowns, Games Fascinate Children At Nutrition Fair

Laura Henry, right, shows a participant how the strength of the body is affected by simply having candy on the tip of her tongue.

After making a necklace from cereal, this little girl compiled her own cookbook.

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — You are never too young to learn to choose healthy foods. Eating the right foods builds strong bones and healthy bodies, but eating too much of the wrong foods can make you weak and ill.

Kids who attended the Nutrition Fair held last week in Lancaster discovered that learning about nutrition can be fun. Games, prizes, and clowns were part of the action planned by the Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program (EFNEP), which is part of the Penn State Extension program.

The fair included activities for adults and children. Tickets were given for participating in the different events and prizes were distributed.

One booth showed participants how to select snacks wisely. By playing a match game, participants learned to select foods with nutritional value.

Participants learned that by eating only one meal a day, they could gain unwanted pounds and not have a healthy diet. Consuming a Big Mac, French fries, and an apple pie means 69 grams of fat were eaten in only one meal.

Eating foods rich in calcium is like putting money in the bank, according to Nancy Wiker, who had a display of bags showing that the adult skeleton should have 11 cups of calcium.

Those who don't eat enough calcium when they are younger end up with only 6.5 cups of calcium or less when they become adults. This means they have osteoporosis, and their bones are weak and break easily.

Nurses from local hospitals were there. Laura Henry showed how the strength of the body is affected by simply having the wrong food against the tip of the tongue. To demonstrate this a participant chewed on a carrot and held out her arm. Henry tried to push her arm down but couldn't. When the same participant put a caramel candy in her mouth, her arm became weak and Henry could easily push it down.

Recipes and nutritional information in Spanish and English were distributed for participants to take home and study.

At one table, children were making their own cookbooks with easy-to-do recipes to make when their moms and dads are too busy to cook for them.

Not all the events at the fair taught nutrition. Some were just plain fun. Clowns intermingled with the crowd to paint characters on the faces and hands of kids.

The clowns were fourth and fifth graders from the special needs class at Washington Elementary School. Teacher Mary Lou Cook said that she had been a clown for nine years, and realized that clowning could be a good motivational tool for students.

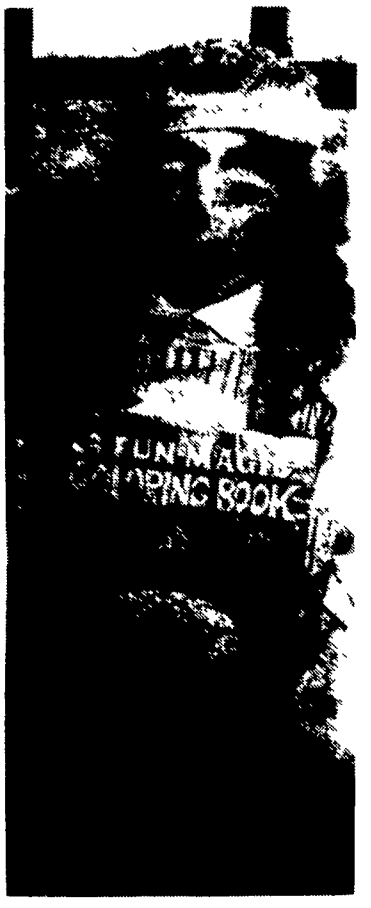
She tells her students if they work hard in school, they can become involved in clowning.

From 14-17 students participate in clown presentations. Mrs. Cook said that students choose a clown name and decide what kind of personality they want their clown to portray. Costumes are handmade or put together piece by piece.

It takes about 30-45 minutes to put the make up on the clowns. The students smear on the white makeup. Teachers and helpers paint on the large lips, high eyebrows, and rosy cheeks typical of clowns.

Some clowns form animals from balloons.

"It's easy," 10-year-old Todd said as he twisted a balloon. "All you need to do is twist the balloon six times."



Marissa performs magic tricks with a coloring book.

It looked easy watching Todd as he twisted balloons into animal shapes to the delight of children attending the fair.

Eddie, better known as Socky the Clown, painted a face on the hand of a squirming toddler.

Marissa, known as Rosie the Clown, delighted guests by performing tricks with her magic coloring book. With a swipe of the hand she could color the whole book, another swipe and the pages were free of all colors.

"I love being a clown," Cupcake said as she made cereal disappear and then reappear in a tin-covered container.

During a recent nutrition workshop, Marlene Nash, multi-extension agent, explains how scientists determine the amount of fat grams in food.

Nutrition Workshop Separates Facts From Fiction

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.) — What's a person to believe?

Magazines, newspapers, and television constantly sprout out the results of new nutritional studies. While some research remains consistent, much appears to flip-flop or sound outrageously conflicting.

To help sort out truth from sensationalism, Marlene Nash, R.D., multi-extension agent, held a nutritional workshop at the Chester County extension office recently.

In easy-to-understand language, Nash explained scientifically how human bodies use nutrients and how studies can come to different conclusions when not conducted properly.

Nash said, "Most health professionals agree that if you reduce the amount of cholesterol and total fat in your diet, you can increase your chances of living a healthier life."

Lowering fat lowers your risk of heart disease and certain cancers.

Scientists have identified three different types of fats:

• Monounsaturated fat is liquid at room temperature and is considered to have heart protection. Souces include olive, canola, peanut, and avocado oils.

• Polyunsaturated fat tends to be liquid at room temperature. These include safflower, sunflower, corn, sesame seed, soybean, and cottonseed oils, and most margarines. However hydrogenating (adding hydrogen to) unsaturated oils makes them more solid at room temperature and behave more like saturated fat. When buying tub or stick margarines, the first ingredient should read liquid soybean or corn oil and not hydrogenated or partially hydrogenated oils.

• Saturated fat comes from animal sources and is found in dairy products and meats. In addition, palm and coconut oil also have saturated fat. Saturated fat and cholesterol are not the same thing, but foods rich in saturated fat are usually high in cholesterol as well. Cholesterol is present only in animal products. Recommended consumption is 300 mg daily.

Cholesterol is a wax-like substance that is present and produced in body cells. It is found only in foods of animal origin such as meats, dairy products, and eggs.

These foods also contain valuable nutrients and need not be eliminated to meet the daily recommended amount of 300 milligrams of cholesterol daily.

Select low-fat dairy foods. Replace whole eggs with egg whites and eat smaller and leaner portions of meat.

Most American women's body weights are 30 percent fat, but the recommended body fat should be 20 percent. Nash cautioned participants to steer clear of fad diets, which often allow people to experience temporary weight loss at a nutritional loss.

To eat properly and to lose weight safely, it is important to understand the role proteins, carbohydrates, and fats play in the body.

Proteins, carbohydrates, and fats provide calories for energy, but fat has more than twice the amount of calories as a gram of carbohydrates or protein. For carbohydrates and protein, one gram equals four calories, but one gram of fat equals nine calories.

Nash explained how scientists determine calories by igniting food to find out how high the temperature rises and how long it burns. When measuring intake, 1,000 mg equals 1 gram.

Fats are stored and work as a body pantry.

Nash said, "It's a survival mechanism."

However, one doesn't need to eat fat to have fat stored. If more protein or carbohydrates than the body can use is consumed, the body turns the excess protein and carbohydrates into fat.

The body stores about 16 hours worth of carbohydrates in the liver. Although protein is the lowest choice for the body to burn calories, the body will break down protein and use it if food isn't consumed for 16 hours. But for long-term non-eating, the body begins to burn fat and protein together.

Nutritionists recommend that adults get 30 percent of calories from fat, but they can reduce that amount without problems. However, children under two should never have eat a diet that is less than 30 percent fat, since a high percentage of fat is needed for proper brain cell development.

Most carbohydrates are a great source of energy and low in fat. There are two different kinds of carbohydrates:

• Complex carbohydrates come from starches, cereals, vegetables, etc.

• Simple carbohydrates include sugars. Ingredients that end with "ose" such as lactose and fructose are sugars.

Complex carbohydrates take the body longer to digest and absorb.

Sodium is an essential nutrient. Daily recommended amount is 3,000-4,000 mg which is equal to 3 to 4 grams, but the body needs only 175 mg. Most Americans consume 10,000 mg of salt. One teaspoon of salt equals 2,000 mg. Table salt can be completely eliminated and a sufficent amount is found naturally in food. Canned and prepared foods often contain high dosages of sodium.

Nash said that 42 essential nutrients are needed daily. Minerals, vitamins, and water are needed to help the body grow and remain healthy. Water soluble vitamins are needed daily because they are used in water and excreted rather than stored. Fat soluble vitamins are not needed every day.

It is best to get vitamins and minerals from food rather then from supplements, but many people do not eat a balanced diet every day. To determine if you should take daily vitamins, assess what you are eating or ask your doctor. You may need only a calcium supplement rather than a multivitamin.

For literature or more information on nutrition or weight control, contact your county extension office or Penn State Cooperative Extension Chester County, Government Services Center, 601 Westtown Rd. Suite 370, West Chester, PA 19382-4546.

At the banquet, the Dr. Robert D. Herr Scholarship was presented to Cory Simo, 17, son of Jim and Theresa Simo, Lancaster, at left. Cory, who received a $250 scholarship from Herr, is studying large animal science at Delaware Valley College. He was chapter president and serves as chapter adviser.

Several were honored for their support of FFA at the banquet. From left, receiving honorary chapter FFA degrees were Cyndi Speace, assistant principal for Garden Spot High School; Sherry Bunting, writer for Lancaster Livestock Reporter and Eastern Lancaster County school board member; and Elaine and Lloyd Hoover, parents of Sheldon Hoover, chapter president; and Sheldon. Grassland FFA Banquet

"Many people had faith in Ken Martin," noted Pennsylvania's FFA sentinel at the Grassland FFA's 39th Annual Parent/ Member Banquet late last week. "I did not have faith in Ken Martin."

The son of Leland and Marilyn Martin spoke of his struggles on his journey to state FFA office and how the help of his family, including those in the FFA, put their faith in him and encouraged him to reach his goals.

Martin spoke to 270 Grassland FFA members, alumni, and guests at Yoder's Restaurant, across from where the chapter makes its home at Garden Spot High School in New Holland.

Martin retold the story of Milton Hershey, founder of Milton Hershey School, and about his initial failures. Hershey had several business failures until he came up with the right formula for success in the form of chocolate. As a result, a town was named after Hershey in his honor.

"Everybody has as much potential for success to that as Mr. Hershey," Martin said.

He noted that Thomas Alva Edison had to search through 2,000 different materials to find a filament that worked on the world's first light bulb. He told FFA'ers to remember to "take time to work to achieve your goals."

At the banquet, the Dr. Robert D. Herr Scholarship was presented to Cory Simo, 17, son of Jim and Theresa Simo, Lancaster. Cory, who received a $250 scholarship from Herr, is studying large animal science at Delaware Valley College. He was chapter president and serves as chapter adviser.

Another honor went to Andy Horning, Mohnton, a 1994 Garden Spot graduate.

Another was Darrell Weaver, East Earl, also a 1994 Garden Spot graduate and a biology major at Millersville.

Integrated Marketing Conference Kicks Off Dairy Promotion

PITTSBURGH (Allegheny Co.) — Representatives for the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program joined more than 150 other colleagues from other local, state, regional, and national dairy promotion organizations to launch new dairy promotion activities at the 1998 Integrated Marketing Conference.

"Dairy promotion efforts are driven by cutting-edge consumer market research, funded by America's dairy farmers, which takes a unified approach — both locally and nationally — to dairy marketing," says Tom Gallagher, chief executive officer of Dairy Management Inc., which sponsored the conference. "This is the first time most of the various state and regional promotion organizations have been able to directly interact with each other — both from the local and national level, as well as region to region. It was an efficient way for us to get together and develop more effective dairy promotion programs."

Jointly, farmers and processors aim to increase fluid milk consumption by 4 percent or 2.2 billion pounds of commercial fluid milk production annually, through the year 2000. To meet this aggressive goal, dairy farmers and processors are creataing an integrated milk marketing program which will invest $181 million in 1998 to boost sales of fluid milk.

Dairy farmer-funded check-off resources are targeting children 1 to 11 with a series of kid-developed and kid-tested "got milk?" television ads. Other promotional activities will include developing nutrition education materials, conducting a new school breakfast campaign, and sponsoring nutrition research that reinforces the value of milk products as the preferred source of children's dietary calcium. Dairy processor efforts will target teens and adults who drink at least one glass of milk daily.

Savings gained by integrating the fluid milk program has freed 420 million to boost local, state, regional and national cheese marketing programs by 40 percent to a total budget of $56 million. By working together at the local, state, regional and national level, dairy farmers are urging consumers to "Behold the power of Cheese."

Cheese marketing efforts are designed to increase annual cheese consumption from the current 28.6 pounds per person to 31 pounds per person by the year 2000.

In addition to television and print advertising, the cheese marketing program includes integrated local and national retail partner promotions, restaurant and foodservice marketing and public relations.

PDPP contracts with the American Dairy Association & Dairy Council Mid East to increase the demand for U.S.-produced dairy products on behalf of dairy farmers in 33 counties of western and north-central Pennsylvania. ADADC Mid East works closely with DMI to implement dairy promotion, education and research programs nationwide.

Since the national dairy farmer check-off program began in 1984, dairy promotional organizations have helped to increase total annual dairy sales by 33 billion pounds — a 27 percent increase.

New Perspective On Amish Farmlands

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) – Dr. Conrad Kanagy will discuss the growth and decline of farming in Lancaster County and its effect on Amish society in his program "Turning Capitalism Upside Down: The Amish Farm Boom," at Hershey Museum on Monday, March 23, at 1 p.m. This program is part of the 1998 Museum Mondays series which provides in-depth discussion on topics relating to the Hershey Museum's collections.

Dr. Kanagy continually monitors the rise and decline of farms in Lancaster County and the effect these sales have upon the Amish, a notable segment of Pennsylvania German society. Since 1984, the Old Order Amish have gained 166 new farms, with the largest number of acquisitions in 1996 – 29 new farms.

This apparent land grab flies in the face of local opinion that the Amish are leaving the county because of suburban growth and economic development. In fact, the Amish appear to be actively resisting such growth by purchasing prime real estate Dr. Kanagy will address questions like why the Amish continue to farm Lancaster County, why they are not moving to cheaper land, and what will happen when no more farms are left to acquire.

Drama Continues

SMOKETOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Last year, Locust Grove Mennonite School's seventh and eighth grade students entertained families, friends, and residents from several local retirement communities with the drama, "Cheaper by the Dozen." This year, students are again re-living the 1920s in the sequel, "Belles on Their Toes."

"Belles on Their Toes" continues the story of the Gilbreth family. Mr. Gilbreth, the father, recently died and now Mrs. Gilbreth must step into his role as an industrial efficiency expert. The drama unfolds and entertaining escapades ensue when Mrs. Gilbreth goes on a six-week speaking tour, leaving the 10 Gilbreth children at home to care for themselves.

Join the Gilbreth family as they provide fun, family entertainment in the drama, "Belles on Their Toes," April 3 at 7 p.m. at Locust Grove Mennonite School. The drama is open to the public and free of charge.

Seedling, Wildflower Sale

HAGERSTOWN, Md. — The Warren County Soil Conservation District will host its annual seedling and wildflower sale in efforts to promote stewardship and reforestation.

The District will offer three-year-old seedlings to landowners interested in planting windbreaks, buffers, and reforestation, or, simply, beautifying their property. Five varieties of evergreens available are sold in easily hand-held bundles of 25 trees at a cost of $12 per bundle. Orders are accepted through April 10, and as supplies last.

Also in a continuing effort to promote the beautification of the countryside, the district will be hosting its second wildflower sale. This year the variety list was expanded to six blends by adding an annual overseeding blend, which can be added to the wildflowers planted last year.

The wildflower mixes are available in two sizes, a .75 ounce package for 225 - 400 square feet for $5 a package and a four-ounce bag for larger areas covering up to 2,500 square feet for $12 each. Orders are accepted through June 1, on a first-come/first-served basis.

The seedlings will be distributed on April 16 - 18, at the Warren County Soil Conservation District on 224 W. Stiger Street in Hackettstown. The wildflower seeds may be picked up at the same location April 16 through June 12.

The sale of the seedlings and wildflowers helps raise money for the conservation education programs the District is involved with each year. For more information and an order form, call the District office at (908) 852-2579.

Butterfly House To Open

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Hershey Gardens has completed planning for the plants and butterfly species which will inhabit the Butterfly House, and has unveiled a newly designed logo for the Butterfly House.

Set to open by mid-June, this outdoor Butterfly House is one of only 15 outdoor butterfly enclosures in North America. Hershey Gardens is working with an internationally renowned butterfly expert, Rick Mikula of Hole-in-Hand Butterfly Farms, to plan, implement, and stock the Butterfly House for its fullest potential.

A listing of the species shows more than 25 varieties which will be included in the Butterfly House, representing many different regions throughout the United States. The plants in the house will supply each butterfly with its own specific host and nectar plant. Plants were very carefully considered since each butterfly species has very specific plants on which they breed and/or feed.

Admission to the Butterfly House is included in regular Hershey Gardens Admission: $5 adults, $2.50 youths (ages 3-15), children under 3 are free.

Hershey Gardens is open daily 9 a.m. - 6 p.m. from Mid-April through October 31, Memorial Day through Labor Day evening hours until 8 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays.

For more information, call (717) 534-3492.

Old Farmer's Almanac Releases 'Good Cook's Companion'

DUBLIN, N.H. — The editors of "The Old Farmer's Almanac" recently researched what it takes to make a really good cook. When all was said and done, their good-cook recipe looked something like this: Combine cleverness with efficiency (both time and money), then fold in truly tantalizing ingredients followed by creative variety. Finally, mix well with old-fashioned methods and a little new technology.

The third annual Good Cook's Companion has stocked its pages full of helpful hints, informative articles, and mouthwatering recipes guaranteed to bring success to the kitchens of experienced cooks, on-the-go professionals, and weekend enthusiasts. Prepared by the folks at "The Old Farmer's Almanac," America's oldest and most trusted household reference guide, the handy companion publication is now on sale for $3.99 at newsstands, supermarkets, specialty shops, and bookstores everywhere.

Saving time and money in the kitchen is one of those lofty ambitions every cook tries to achieve. The Good Cook's Companion offers seven time- and energy-saving recipes in "Make Supper Using Just One Pan." With selections such as Spinach and Pasta Soup or Chicken Mexicana Casserole, this method doesn't sacrifice taste for convenience. One thing to remember with one-pan cooking is to be sure the pot is big enough to hold all the ingredients before you begin.

Frugal cooks still serve excellent meals: it's just that they do it with money left over. Cash-conscious chefs often turn to meatloaf because, frankly, nothing is more down-home and satisfying. The best advice for meatloaf makers: Blend by hand to keep the mixture light.

Editor Georgia Orcutt describes the importance of having great recipes as well as the know-how to make them work. "the best recipe in the world won't help if the cook doesn't have the skills to put it together," explains Orcutt. "This edition of the 'Good Cook's Companion' is packed with great recipes and the required helpful hints. We've even included an article on the whys and hows of cutting vegetables, because this affects the way they cook. Did you know that peppers saute more evenly in squares than in rings and that green beans left whole, with just the ends removed, retain more of their juice and food value while cooking?"

As more and more people turn to prepared foods and take-out meals, the old-fashioned methods of cooking are in danger of being forgotten. In an effort to preserve this knowledge, the "Good Cook's Companion" includes an article on how to bake a cake from scratch (adding eggs and oil to a cake mix doesn't count), complete with recipes and tips. (If it calls for cake flour, the Good Cook's tells how you can adjust for all-purpose flour.) Or you can rouse your loved ones from their slumber this Saturday with warm, fragrant, homemade cinnamon rolls with the recipe that includes detailed directions to ensure delicious results.

Even though old methods are great, new technology offers cooks the opportunity to discover endless menu possibilities. The Good Cook's "Cooking on the Net" guide suggests sites for everything from coffee to chilies and pies to pasta — and even tasty insect recipes. (Perhaps you should bake some Chocolate Chirpie Chip Cookies with dry-roasted crickets for the next office party.)

Cleverness is a characteristic that develops with experience. The Good Cook's Companion is loaded with valuable advice designed to increase your C.Q. (cleverness quotient). For example, when making muffins, try buttermilk for special moistness and flavor; puree leftover cooked carrots and use it to thicken soups; reduce the saltiness of feta cheese by rinsing it with cold water before serving; and add color, flavor, and fragrance to salads with tulips. (Just remember, only the petals are edible!)

The Good Cook's Companion" is one of several publications produced by Yankee Publishing Inc., of Dublin, New Hampshire. It follows on the heels of the 1998 editions of "The Old Farmer's Almanac" and the "Gardener's Companion" and will be joined by the second edition of the "Guide to Summer's Best Recipes" in June.

Copies of the 1998 Good Cook's Companion are also available through mail order by sending $3.99, plus a shipping and handling charge of $1.95 to The Old Farmer's Almanac, P.O. Box 520, Dublin, NH 03444. Orders can also be placed on-line at www.almanac.com.

Finally, the next time you're searching for "brain food," consider curry. Indian philosophers believe that eating more-complex and subtly flavored foods exercises the brain, making it more capable of understanding, appreciating, and surviving the complexities of life. We knew there was a reason it tasted so good!

Here are some recipes from the cookbook.

cook until it thickens slightly, about 1 to 2 minutes. Set aside, and cover to keep warm. Blend the eggs in a bowl, making sure the whites and yolks are completely mixed together. Add salt and pepper. In a large, heavy saucepan, melt the rest of the butter. Set the pan in a slowly simmering water bath. Pour the eggs into the pan and cook gently, stirring constantly with a wooden spoon. As the eggs thicken on the bottom and sides, scrape them so they mix into the uncooked eggs. Continue cooking until all the eggs have thickened but are still soft and moist, about 15 minutes. Add salt and pepper, if needed. Spoon the eggs onto warm plates and add a dollop of the creamy spinach to each. Serves 4.

Creamy Smoked Salmon Tarts
(This recipe won second prize in The Old Farmer's Almanac Egg Recipe Contest in 1995)

5 frozen phyllo pastry sheets, thawed
3 tablespoons unsalted butter, melted
4 large egg yolks
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
3 large eggs
1 cup half-and-half
1 cup whipping cream
6 ounces smoked salmon (lox), diced
4 scallions, chopped
1 to 2 tablespoons chopped fresh dill, or 1 teaspoon dried salt and pepper, to taste
dill or parsley sprigs, for garnish

Butter a deep 9½-inch pie plate. Place 1 phyllo sheet on your work surface. Brush the sheet with butter and fold in half lengthwise. Brush folded surface with butter. Cut in half crosswise. Place 1 phyllo rectangle buttered side down in pie plate, covering bottom and letting it overhang the edge by ½ inch. Brush top of phyllo dough in pie plate with butter. Place second phyllo rectangle crosswise on top of the first sheet. Brush with butter. Repeat process with remaining 4 phyllo sheets. Fold overhanging pastry under to form crust edge flush with edge of pie plate. Brush with butter.

Preheat oven to 350° F. Whisk egg yolks and mustard in a bowl to blend; beat in eggs, half-and-half, cream, salmon, scallions, and dill. Add salt and pepper, to taste. Pour mixture into prepared crust and bake until center is set, about 50 minutes. Cool. Garnish and serve at room temperature or slightly warm. Serves 6 to 8. (Courtesy of Diane Hafferty)

Carefully crack an egg on top of the ham. Put rolls on a baking sheet and bake in the oven for 5 to 7 minutes, or until the eggs have begun to set. Remove from oven and sprinkle each egg with salt and 2 tablespoons of shredded cheese. Return to oven and bake for 2 to 3 minutes more, or until the cheese has melted. Put the tops back onto the rolls and serve hot. Serves 6.

In a medium bowl, beat the eggs, milk, maple syrup, and remaining ½ cup sour cream. In a buttered 10-inch pie plate or 9-inch square baking dish, layer half the bread; spread apple-raisin mixture over the bread; then layer with remaining bread. Pour egg-milk mixture over. The Other Way To Measure A FORCE Field Requires A Scale.

A little mid- to late-season digging will show you how well FORCE 3G insecticide controls tough insect pests like rootworms, cutworms, wireworms and white grubs. The newer pyrethroid chemistry of FORCE gives you better stand counts than older, less effective insecticides. It's why farmers who've experienced a FORCE field of protection — in no till, minimum till and conventional tillage systems — stick with it year after year. And, of course, the measurably higher yields at the end of the season.

The other big reason is how safe FORCE 3G is to birds, earthworms and you. Our 3G formulation lets you handle half as much FORCE as other insecticides. To save you time, money and cut your insecticide exposure in half. And FORCE doesn't interact with sulfonylurea herbicides.

Don't settle for less than a FORCE field of protection. Ask your full service crop protection dealer or applicator for FORCE 3G.

Or call our hotline at 1-800-759-2500.

2 HONEY BROOK HERDS AVERAGE OVER 90 LBS. MILK PER COW/PER DAY

ON AIM™

Service, BST, TMR, Cow Comfort, genetics and the flexibility of the AIM Technology have all contributed to the success of these two herds.

SERVICE: Our Sensening salesman keeps us on our toes, keeping us informed and working with us to meet the many challenges we face. Forages have been a major challenge in the past couple of years, and Sensenig's have worked with us to find replacement products, which many times has meant they sell us less feed.

BST: We have used BST since it became legal and feel it works for us.

TMR: Our TMR Mixer helps in many ways, every bite is balanced, it has increased our dry matter intake, makes it easier to keep feed in front of the cows, and saves a lot of trips around the barn.

COW COMFORT: We installed mattresses in one farm, and we liked them so much we soon put them in on the other farm. Many times between feedings and milkings most of our cows will be laying down chewing their cud and we know that makes milk.

THE AIM TECHNOLOGY: Master Mix Feeds has been in the bypass protein business for a long time and AIM has been an important part of our nutrition since it first came out. We like the way AIM can be customized to our particular needs.

"A couple of years ago we looked at some area herds which were achieving RHA's in the 22,000 to 23,000 range and wondered if it was possible for us to reach that level. In the last year our RHA has increased almost 4,500 lb., and our last testing report had our herd reach 25,000 lb. milk. No one thing does it all, but all of the pieces working together make it work. Sensening's and AIM are two very important pieces for us."

N.Y. Vegetable Conference Attracts 1,300

ITHACA, N.Y. — The 1998 New York State Vegetable Conference Feb. 10-12 was another outstanding event for New York's vegetable industry. More than 1,300 growers, processors, and allied industry representatives came from around the state, the Northeast, and Canada to attend this major event that, now in its 10th year, is consistently one of the top vegetable industry conferences in the Northeast.

It is co-sponsored by Cornell Cooperative Extension/NYS College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, the NYS Vegetable Growers Association, the Empire State Potato Club, and the Associated NYS Food Processors Association. New at the Conference this year were the annual meetings of the NYS Berry Growers Association, adding more than 100 attendees to the first day.

These educational meetings for fresh market and processing vegetable producers have been the focus of this statewide conference since its inception in 1989. In general, for each crop covered, talks include information on new varieties and plant breeding research updates; weed, pest and disease control options; soil and fertility management; marketing; and a wide variety of related key topics of concern to commercial producers.

This year, the all-day educational sessions this year focused on potatoes, berries and other small fruits, transplants, and onions. The half-day sessions included sweet corn, cabbage, snap beans, soil fertility, leafy greens, pesticide application technologies, biological controls, organic matter management, culinary herbs, pumpkins and greenhouse tomatoes.

Several important vegetable-related organizations also hold meetings during the conference, in addition to the Processing Commodity Advisory Committees at their specific commodity sessions. The NYS Seed Potato Growers met for their statewide meeting prior to the first day of the conference, with a full program and excellent speakers. Donald Shardlow of Cornell University is the program's manager. Special sessions were held on the latest in tomato late blight research and controls, updates on labor regulations for the coming year, and the many opportunities that on-line services and related technology resources offer for the coming year offer for growers. In addition, an all-day meeting was held with nationally-known researchers on the golden nematode problems in potatoes.

"What's New from Industry" speakers who were exhibitors in the trade show or sponsors of the conference gave updates on the new items and services from their companies in many of the sessions.

Both Certified Crop Advisor (CCA) credits for advisors in New York and New England and NYS pesticide recertification credits were given for topics on each of the three days in the sessions.

Conference attendees had many opportunities to visit about 80 exhibitors with the latest in seeds, biological and chemical crop protectants, packaging, irrigation supplies, vegetable equipment and machinery, computer applications, refrigeration and storages, business services, safety equipment and many other resources vital to commercial vegetable production — for fresh markets as well as processing growers, and for operations large and small. As in the past, tables loaded with industry publications, catalogs, brochures and related resources for growers to pick up were a part of the trade show.

A press conference was held at noon on Feb. 10 by Dr. Darryl Lund, dean of the NYS College of Agriculture & Life Sciences at Cornell University, and Dr. James Hunter, director of the NYS Agriculture Experiment Station at Geneva, N.Y., to announce the release of six new varieties of fruits and vegetables. It was unusual since new varieties are the result of long-term collaboration among researchers and industry, sometimes taking as long as 10-15 years to breed, test and evaluate, with another 10-20 years before they are commercially accepted. Lund and Hunter credited the potato, vegetable, and berry growers for helping the public and the college to fund the long-term research necessary for the development of these new varieties.

The two new red raspberries — "Prelude" and "Encore" — bred by John Sanford and Kevin Maloney will extend the production season for NYS berry growers, enabling New York consumers to eat locally produced berries from June through September, rather than those shipped in from elsewhere. The "Whitaker" Cocozelle-type summer squash and "Onondaga" Ithaca-type head lettuce, bred by Richard W. Robinson and Joseph W. Shail, are remarkable for their disease resistance, which came from hundreds of crosses from wild species known for their resistance characteristics. Robert Plaisted, Cornell's highly-respected potato breeder, introduced his new "Salem" and "Reba" varieties. "Salem" is an early-emerging, mid-season potato with high-yielding ability, bred for table stock, while "Reba" is a mid- to late-season potato bred for both the potato chip market and table use. One of Plaisted's hallmark contributions to the New York potato industry is that all potatoes released by his program are resistant to the golden nematode — a pest that is unique in the U.S. to New York, can significantly impact yield and marketing of the crop. In addition, certified seed for both of these new varieties will be available for the 1998 growing season.

The Annual Meeting of the Empire State Potato Club also was on Feb. 10. Officers re-elected were John Meyer of Cohocton as president, Ralph Child of Malone as vice president, and Larry Bowman of North Collins as secretary/treasurer. Gary Pryputniewicz of Waterville was re-elected to the board as well. Melanie Wickham of Stanley continues as executive secretary of the Empire State Potato Club and show manager of their huge, annual Empire Farm Days held each summer in August.

Nearly 200 attended the informal Social Hour on Wednesday, Feb. 11. Special guests and legislators were introduced by Larry Eckhardt, president of the NYS Vegetable Growers Association, followed by several speeches and awards. Dr. James Hunter, director of the NYS Agricultural Experiment Station at Geneva, addressed what's ahead for the station and Cornell University and the importance of the private-public sector partnership and industry support for research, particularly in light of the continued funding uncertainties from Albany.

Two awards for outstanding work in integrated pest management were made during the Conference's Social Hour. Dr. James Tette, director of the IPM Program at the NYS Experiment Station, presented awards to Tim and Colleen Stanton of Feura Farm at Feura Bush, N.Y., for their rotational practices, use of resistant varieties, conservation tillage and other IPM method, and to Richard Wildman, president of Agricultural Consulting Services of Rochester, a private crop-consulting firm in the state offering production advice to some 70,000 acres of vegetables and field crops. In addition, Curt Petzoldt, assistant director of the IPM Program and vegetable IPM coordinator for NYS, was honored for not only his work with the IPM Program but also for being a co-founder with Timothy Weigle of the Northeast Weather Association (NWA), a non-profit membership organization that provides growers with timely weather data and pest forecasts to aid growers in determining when diseases and pests need to be controlled and to what extent. Starting this year, the NWA will offer this information to producers of ornamentals and field crops.

Frank Wiles of the 160-member NYS Berry Growers Association, a long-time berry and vegetable grower as well as a former Cornell cooperative extension agent, was also honored for his leadership and achievements with IPM and berry growers statewide, through scouting, selection of disease-resistant varieties, and cropping practices. A two-year grant from the Pesticide Environmental Stewardship Program has helped to initiate the NYS Berry IPM Labeling Program for New York.

The NYS Vegetable Growers Assoc., held its Annual Meeting and Breakfast on Wednesday, Feb. 11. Business of the association was conducted, along with the election of officers and board of directors for 1998. Re-appointed were Larry Eckhardt of Stephentown as president, Mark Henry of Eden as vice president, and Ed Hansen Sr. of Stanley as treasurer. Four of the five board members re-elected to three-year terms were Larry Eckhardt, Jack Gill of Hurley, Jeff Green of Whitney Point, and Jeff Kubecka of Kirkville. Jackie Gurda of Gurda Gardens, Goshen, N.Y., was elected as a director on the board for a three-year term, replacing out-going director Gregory Yurchuk Jr. of Florida. Jean Warholic of Freeville continues as executive secretary and newsletter editor for the Association.

Those present at the breakfast were given an update of association activities, updated on the new Fresh Market Vegetable Research Fund's first round of grants and projects in 1997, and other major projects that had been of primary focus in the past year. Laura Pedersen of Cornell Cooperative Extension/Ontario County gave an update on the summer tour being planned for EPA and other key officials. Progress in dealing with the forthcoming Food Quality Protection Act (FQPA) was discussed. Gary Fitch of Agricultural Affiliates gave a brief summary of what's ahead for labor in the vegetable industry in 1998.

Gary Fitch of Agricultural Affiliates and a panel of growers, along with representatives from the NYS Department of Labor, held sessions on Feb. 11 and 12 on what's ahead for NYS labor in the 1998 season, along with a review of the latest INS activities and the new enforcement mode by NYS DEC for the federal Worker Protection Standards. The unpredictable labor supply for the coming season continues to be among the top concerns for many growers around the state. Labor-related legislation pending in Albany and in Washington, D.C. was also discussed.

Geneva Releases New Disease-Resistant Lettuce

LIVERPOOL, N.Y. — "Onondago" is a new variety of head lettuce specifially bred for cultivation in New York.

Released at the NYS Vegetable Conference on Feb. 10 by plant breeders at Cornell University, it is the only lettuce resistant to both cucumber mosaic virus (CMV) and corky root rot. It derives CMV resistance from a wild species of lettuce called Lactuca saligna.

"Wild species are very difficult to use in breeding because of their distant relationship," said Richard W. Robinson, the vegetable breeder at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station in Geneva, N.Y. He developed the variety with Research Support Specialist Joseph Shail and virologist Dr. Rosario Provvidenti.

"Onondaga" is a cross between "Saladcrisp" and "Montello." It is light green in color, with a crisp, firm head. It resists physiological disorders like bolting and tip burn and is a mid-season variety, according to Robinson. He is the only plant breeder who has even been successful in breeding CMV resistance derived from L. saligna into domestic lettuce.

At the same conference, Robinson and Shail also released "Whitaker," a new variety of squash that also derives its disease resistance from a wild variety.

"Conventional breeding at Cornell University is accomplishing improvements that would not otherwise be achieved," said Robinson. No commercial seed company would undertake a breeding program so long, difficult, and uncertain of success as transferring disease resistance from L. saligna to lettuce, or Cucurbita ecuadorensis to squash.

"The squash and lettuce varieties we are introducing illustrate the importance of conventional breeding at public institutions such as Cornell University," said Robinson. "Biotechnology can be a very rapid way to breed for some traits, and private seed companies are doing an increasingly good job of breeding vegetable varieties, but neither biotechnology nor private seed companies have developed varieties such as Whitaker squash, and Onondaga lettuce."

Plant breeders at the Geneva Experiment Station seek to develop superior vegetable varieties and/or germplasm for further seed development by commercial seed companies. The new varieties are characterized by superior quality (for both the fresh and processed vegetable markets), insect and disease resistance, tolerance to cold weather, productivity, and growth habit.

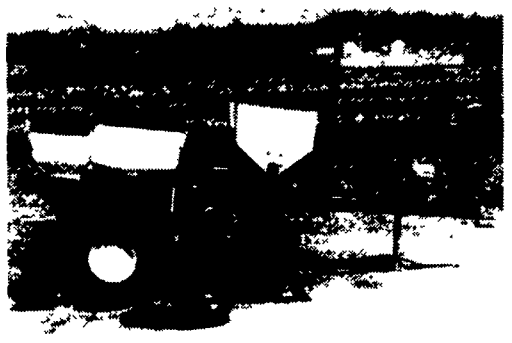
NEW FOR THE '98 SEASON (ideal for horse drawn)



Accurate seed spacing and precise depth increase yield potential.

- Time-proven positive air metering system and edge drop seed discs gently singulate seeds to eliminate wasteful doubles.
- The short 18" seed drop makes seed spacing accurate.
- Consistent seed depth is assured through our independently operating walking beam gauge wheels... adjust in 1/8" increments.
- Low air pressure gently handles fragile seed coat.
- Fewer moving parts reduce maintenance and downtime.

Vote YES for Vegetables

Attention Vegetable Growers

PENNSYLVANIA PROVEN PRODUCE

The Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association urges you to vote "YES" to continue the Pennsylvania Vegetable Marketing and Research Program.

The Pennsylvania vegetable industry needs the Program if it hopes to have a source of research and promotion monies available to carry it into the next century. The industry needs the Program to provide a united voice for the entire vegetable industry.

Consider the following promotional accomplishments of the Program over the past ten years:

- developed the "Pennsylvania Proven Produce" logo enabling growers to identify their produce as being locally grown.

- printed colorful point-of-purchase materials and distributed them free to growers, again enabling direct marketers to identify their produce as Pennsylvania grown with professional-looking signs.
- published consumer brochures about Pennsylvania vegetables, giving consumers nutritional and preparation information about vegetables.
- distributed point-of-purchase materials to supermarkets, enabling them to clearly identify the produce they buy from Pennsylvania growers as being locally grown.
- erected billboards across the state for the past two years promoting Pennsylvania vegetables with the assistance of the Department of Agriculture. This billboard campaign was the basis for the Department of Agriculture to place additional produce billboards and establish a pilot project of encourage supermarkets to purchase more local produce from Pennsylvania growers.

- mailed news releases about Pennsylvania vegetable crops as they come into season to newspapers across the state. This has resulted in hundreds of newspaper articles about Pennsylvania vegetables being published in newspapers read by nearly 14 million people.

These promotional efforts are all designed to remind consumers that there is a viable vegetable industry in Pennsylvania that produces fresh, quality and nutritious vegetables. Consumers need to be reminded that not all produce is grown in California and Florida.

The Program has also helped fund 78 vegetable research projects with over $165,000 in the last nine years. An additional $22,500 is allocated for research in 1998. Agriculture has traditionally relied on government funds to support production research but those funds have declined. Growers need to be willing to invest in research for their own industry.

The following research has been funded in part by the Program and some may not have been done without the Program's support:

- the development of the FAST integrated pest management (IPM) system for tomato fungicide scheduling (Dr. Alan MacNab's work).
- establishment of a sweet corn insect pest monitoring IPM network in Pennsylvania.
- tomato fertility research which has allowed growers to reduce fertilizers costs.
- snap bean root rot and snap bean herbicide research (which helped support the labels for Ronilan and Reflex).
- the breeding of disease-resistant tomatoes and squash.
- variety evaluations for disease resistance.
- vine crop disease research
- development of greenhouse vegetable integrated pest management practices

Plus the Program has helped fund many more research projects.

This vegetable promotion and research activity by the Program will cease if you as a grower do not vote YES to continue the Vegetable Marketing and Research Program.

Vote YES for Vegetables

The Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association cannot pick-up the research and promotion activities of the Program and continue them on the same level. The vegetable industry in Pennsylvania will lose much of its consumer visibility that the Vegetable Marketing and Research Program has worked hard to earn. Don't be fooled into thinking that individual growers can do it best themselves. There is strength and economy in numbers. The vegetable industry can prosper much better by working together as one unit under the Pennsylvania Vegetable Marketing and Research Program in promoting vegetables and funding vegetable research. Remember, this is not a government controlled program. The Program is governed by a Board consisting of 12 growers, one sales agent representative plus the Secretary of Agriculture. They do what is best for you as a grower.

This advertisement is paid for solely by the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association, a voluntary association of commercial vegetable and berry growers No grower assessment monies paid to the Pennsylvania Vegetable Marketing and Research Program were used to pay for this advertisement. The Association is entirely separate from the Pennsylvania Vegetable Marketing and Research Program

If you are a grower of one or more acres of vegetables (or 1,000 sq. ft. of greenhouse vegetables) and did not receive a ballot, please call 717-787-2376.

Pennfield Announces Promotion, Hiring

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Pennfield has announced the promotion of Robert (Bob) J. Buehler to the position of vice president, ag products division.

The ag products division was formed in 1997 as part of the growth and expansion plans of Pennfield's feed business. Ag products includes all of feed marketing, production, and delivery, as well as the ingredient and grain merchandising functions of the company.

Buehler joined Pennfield in June 1996 and has held several marketing and management positions since that time, including the transition to and implementation of the ag products division.

He was the southern regional manager from the time he joined the Pennfield team until January 1997, when he was promoted to manager of livestock and poultry feeds. He held this position until May 1997, and was then promoted to general manager feed marketing.

Also Bob Buchler, vice president of the ag products division of Pennfield Feeds, announced that Joseph (Skip) Heeg joined Pennfield Feeds as its manager, horse and specialty feeds.

Robert (Bob) J. Buehler

Bidirectional Tractor Is Versatile

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — New Holland's new Model TV140 Bidirectional™ tractor can be operated engine-end or cab-end first, so the operator can face either direction and still tackle the work head-on. New technology, combined with design features based on input from farmers, gives the TV140 best-in-class operation for loader work, fieldwork, and municipal applications.

According to John Hundley, product marketing manager at New Holland, the Model TV140 4WD Bidirectional tractor, which replaces the Model 9030, has been totally redesigned.

"The Bidirectional is a well-accepted concept, but we wanted to improve it, so we asked Bidirectional tractor owners as well as customers who had never driven one to tell us what they wanted. Our product desgin team incorporated their suggestions in the design of the TV140.

The most visible change is the new, modern shape of the TV140, which matches the New Holland family look of the Genesis™, Gemini™ and Boomer™ tractors. The sleek design with a sloped engine hood provides excellent visibility when using front-end attachments as well as easy access to service areas by means of the flip-up hood.

Another visible change is the cab, which has been completely redesigned for greater comfort and convenience, no matter which direction the tractor is being operated. The exclusive Turnabout™ console, which houses the primary tractor controls, actually turns around with the seat so the tractor can be operated cab-end first or engine-end first. A larger, roomier cab with a deluxe air-ride seat provides superior operator comfort and is easier to get in and out of. The cab was also designed with a large glass area for outstanding visibility — an operator facing the rear can see straight to the drawbar in dry, dusty conditions is provided by the new Air-Flow system on the variable-speed feeder house. Two integrated fans draw up to 850 cubic feet of air per minute through the front of the feeder house and discharge dust and debris downward through the sides of the feeder house. The integral system, driven by the variable-speed feeder house drive belt, does not use bulky attachments that can compromise operator visibility.

New sliding side shields on the separator body prevent trash from plugging the air intake to the cleaning system for improved harvesting in muddy and high-trash conditions. New, perforated, fan bottom shields increase air flow to the cleaning system for enhanced cleaning capacity.

Ag Outlook Forums Successful

LEWISBURG (Union Co.) — Northeastern Farm Credit, ACA sponsored the 8th Annual Ag Outlook Forums on Feb. 12. Speakers included Dr. Freddie Barnard of Purdue University, Al Wenger of Wenger Feeds, and Professor Lou Moore of Penn State University.

The second forum was held at 6:30 p.m. at the Best Western Country Cupboard Inn in Lewisburg with an attendance of 143. This forum, too, was well received and many questions were asked of the speakers.

Northeastern Farm Credit, ACA President Robert T. Reich commented, "This was one of the best forums we've had. I am very pleased with the turnout and the reactions people had to the speakers. Northeastern is aware of the concerns of the ag community and we are here to help in any way possible."

Deere Unveils Combines

MOLINE, Ill. — John Deere's new Ten Series and CTS II Maximizer™ combines feature several customer-driven enhancements that improve harvesting performance especially in high-yielding, high-moisture corn and soybeans, and make routine harvest adjustments more precise and easier to do than ever before.

The new Ten Series and CTS II Combines all have increased power levels. The 9610, CTS II, SideHill 9510, and 9510 Combines use the the new 8.1-liter John Deere PowerTech™ engine with power bulge and power boost features that enhance machine productivity and performance. The 9610 and CTS II models have standard power rating of 275 hp. The 9510 Combines are rated at 220 hp. A 240-hp output rating is available as an option on corn and rice 9510 models and all SideHill 9510 Combines. The 9410 Combine is rated at 190 hp and retains the field-proven John Deere 6.8-liter engine.

A 7-percent power bulge gives the combines with 8.1-liter engines additional horsepower when engine rpm decreases to 2,100 rpm. In the 9610 and CTS II models, for example, power bulge provides up to 19 more horsepower for a total power output of as much as 294 horsepower to handle tough crop and field conditions. The 9610, 9510, SideHill 9510, and CTS II combines have a 33-hp power boost (32 percent greater than the 9000 Series Combines) for increased productivity while unloading on-the-go. The timed boost has also been increased from 2 to 3 minutes per cycle to help ensure fast unloading.

All Ten Series Corn Combines feature a new Generation II, wide-spaced, 13-bar concave that enhances threshing and separation, especially in high-moisture corn and soybeans. The new concave employs a tighter radius geometry for more complete threshing at the front of the concave, while allowing slower cylinder speeds for more gentle threshing action.

The spaces between the first eight bars of the concave are 23 percent larger for increased separating capacity. An improved beater grate profile enhances material movement and reduces the chances of plugging in green, tough-to-thresh crops.

Improved harvesting visibility

Zeneca Offers Free Patent License

WILMINGTON, Del. — Zeneca Ag Products announced that it is offering corn growers and farm supply retailers a free license under U.S. Patent No. 5,627,131 (also known as the "131" patent) in order to use Zeneca's safened corn herbicides in mixtures with Rhone-Poulenc's Balance™ herbicide.

The "131" patent, issued in May 1997 covers herbicidal mixtures of isoxaflutole, the active ingredient in Balance, with any one of a group of commercial corn safeners known as dichloracetamides.

The license will allow growers and agricultural retailers to tankmix Zeneca's Surpass®, TopNotch™, FulTime™ or DoublePlay® herbicides with Balance once it becomes registered for use. The offer is effective immediately and is for the 1998 growing season.

"When growers and dealers purchase these Zeneca corn herbicides, the license will enable them to tankmix the products with Balance without any risk of infringing the '131' patent," said Pat Steiner, corn herbicides market lead at Zeneca.

Steiner explained that mixing Balance with other companies' safened corn herbicides could constitute patent infringement, because Rhone-Poulenc has not reached any agreement with Zeneca Limited, the actual patent owner, to operate under the "131" patent.

"We would like to reach an agreement between Zeneca and Rhone-Poulenc that would allow any grower to tankmix any safened herbicide with Balance," Steiner said. "However, until an agreement is reached, Zeneca is forced to defend its patent. We are licensing dealers and growers to use Zeneca corn herbicides in combination with Balance because the patent dispute is with Rhone-Poulenc, not with our customers."

The free license will be issued by the agricultural dealer each time the growers purchases the Zeneca corn herbicide, and is good only for the tankmixing of the Zeneca product purchased.

Penn State To Collect Containers

DEL VOIGHT
Agronomy Extension Agent

Over the years I have collected various pesticides for use in my home lawn and flower beds. Some were obatined from my father who simply put extra chemical in a bottle, labeled it with a felt pen, and gave it to me to use. Now I can't figure out what is in the bottle because the label or hand written label is worn off or illegible.

Also, some of the pesticides were frozen and the activity of the product is in question.

Penn State recommends for homeowners to only buy what is needed for the current year use and do not store for long periods. It is a good idea to only purchase what you need and not save materials for more than a year.

What is a person to do with unwanted pesticides? Legally the pesticide should be applied to an area for which it was intended to be applied on the label. This means one could apply the product over an area to dispose of it. It does not mean it may be dumped on the soil anywhere or dumped down the drain.

The container then should be triple rinsed and the rinsate or left over rinse water should be applied over a large area. The bottle then can be discarded safely or recycled through the PDA Pesticide container recycling program.

To aid with the safe disposal of pesticide containers, unused pesticides, or a mysterious product unknown to you that you may have sitting around your home or garage, Penn State Cooperative Extension will be offering a pesticide collection simply to offer you the opportunity to safely dispose of all unwanted pesticides.

The program is a partnership with Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and called Chem Sweep.

April 25 will be the collection date in Lebanon. Collected pesticides will be disposed of properly by incineration by a hired contractor. The collection will be located at the Lebanon Fairgrounds on the corner of Rocherty and Cornwall roads. All costs of disposal are covered by your tax dollars. The program is totally free and you will not be responsible for the pesticide once you deliver it to the collection site.

We are asking you to bring your unwanted or unknown pesticides only. Do not bring paint or other products that are not pesticides to the site. Pesticides include herbicides (2,4-D™), insecticides (Dursban™, Diazinon™), fungicides (Daconil™) and others such as rodenticides, miticides, nematicides, molluscicides, growth regulators, defoliants, and desiccants.

Protect our environment by planning to bring unwanted pesticides on Saturday, April 25, between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. to the Lebanon Fairgrounds. If you have questions, call me at (717) 270-4391.

Conference On Natural Resources Income Opportunities

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Private landowners will want to take a few minutes during the hectic holiday season to register for an important conference being held April 5-7.

As its name suggests, the Natural Resources Income Opportunities on Private Lands Conference is designed for farmers, woodland owners, natural resources professionals, and others interested in learning how to successfully choose and manage a private land income opportunity. The tree-day event will be held at the Ramada Inn Convention Center in Hagerstown, Md.

More than 35 speakers from Vermont to Arkansas — including landowners, consultants, foresters, and cooperative extension service faculty from several states — will share their expertise on a variety of income-generating opportunities, including fishing, hunting, timber management, ecotourism, aquaculture, and the production and marketing of such products as maple syrup and ginseng. They also will explore issues involving finances, liability, insurance and environmental impact.

"Private landowners are becoming increasingly interested in income opportunities that make use of natural resources, and they need the best possible information to make wise decisions," said Jonathan Kays, regional natural resources specialist with the Maryland Cooperative Extension Service. "This conference is designed to give them that information." Participants will qualify for 13 Society of American Foresters continuing education credits (category one).

The Natural Resources Income Opportunities on Private Lands Conference is sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Services of the University of Maryland, Cornell University, Ohio State University, Pennsylvania State University, Virginia Tec, and West Virginia University, along with several federal, state and regional agencies and organizations. The registration fee is $95 and includes a complete copy of the conference proceedings.

For a brochure and registration form, call your local cooperative extension service office, or call Cindy Mason at (301) 432-2767, ext. 301, or send an e-mail message to ct11 @umail.umd edu.

Pa. Beef Council Wins Top Marketing Awards

MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Beef Council received top marketing honors from both the Pennsylvania Society of Association Executives (PaSAE) and the National Agri-Marketing Association (NAMA) with their most recent consumer promotion entitled "Make Your Summer Sizzle."

The Best of NAMA competition honors the best work in agricultural communications. Entries are judged based on creative concept and execution. This year PBC competed against other agricultural businesses to win first place in the category of producer-funded advertising campaigns.

PBC also took top honors in the Kudos Competition sponsored by PaSAE. Judges reviewed 27 different communication programs entered by other associations in Pennsylvania. PBC's "Make Your Summer Sizzle" recipe booklet was chosen to win first place in the category of One-Time Publication.

The "Make Your Summer Sizzle" promotion consisted of a four-color recipe booklet which included 10 mouth-watering beef and veal recipes, along with valuable coupons for cents off many of the products included in the recipes. In addition, consumers were offered the opportunity to write to the beef council for additional free recipes and were given the chance to enter a sweepstakes to win a free dude ranch vacation.

The "Make Your Summer Sizzle" promotional campaign is just one more example of the effective consumer marketing programs that the Pennsylvania Beef Council conducts with beef check-off dollars. If you are interested in more information about our consumer programs, or would like beef recipes, contact the council at (717) 939-7000.

Timothy Elkner, Penn State Cooperative Extension, Lancaster County

Last month I talked about ways you could consider marketing your vegetable and fruit crops. This month I'd like to continue in the area of crop sales by discussing produce quality. I know that we can produce top quality fruits and vegetables here in the county but unfortunately I don't always see top quality at the point of sale

More than ever before you need to be marketing only the highest quality produce in order to get the highest prices for your fruits and vegetables. I expect that this year we may have a very tight market due to more producers. With milk prices still fluctuating and tobacco prices off, many people may look to fruits and vegetables as alternate crops to replace income from those areas. In addition, I'm always receiving calls from "gentlemen" farmers, or people with small farms who are looking for ways to make money from their land

These part-time farmers are usually considering growing some type of vegetable, most frequently sweet corn or pumpkins. All of these producers mean that you are going to have to distinguish your produce from everyone else's. But how?

The two options you have are to grow something that few, if any other people are producing locally or to consistently sell only the highest quality produce. The first option is probably going to require more effort because you may have to develop the market for that new type of fruit or vegetable.

If you have the time and desire to do this then you may be able to develop a successful niche market for the new crop and enjoy the benefits of reduced competition. However, I expect that the majority of growers are going to be more successful by improving the quality of the produce they market.

There are many factors that control the quality of a fruit or vegetable when it is sold. Stress from weather conditions, insects, and diseases as well as cultural practices influence quality before you even enter the field to harvest. While most weather conditions are beyond our control, drought stress can be relieved by using irrigation.

All fresh market vegetable producers should have an irrigation system in order to produce a top quality crop. The main way to control excess moisture is to select the best fields for fruit and vegetable production and to put crops that tolerate more water such as corn on your low areas. Damage from diseases and insects is controlled by applying labeled compounds when needed. Be sure to closely monitor your crop so that you are not applying the materials too early or too late.

Cultural practices include selecting a variety adapted to your marketing method and proper fertility management. Variety selection is very important because you do not want to be selling processing vegetables in a fresh market.

Fresh market varieties will usually be softer and store for shorter periods of time but the eating quality will be higher. Fertility management will also influence quality and storability of produce. Excess nitrogen will reduce yields, quality, and storability.

Deficiencies of any other nutrient will also result in decreased yields and quality. Use regular soil tests to monitor soil nutrient levels and carefully monitor nitrogen applications during the growing season.

Many growers do a good job with the field portion of crop production but then destroy some of that quality during harvest and handling. Always start by harvesting the crop, whether fruit or vegetable, at the best maturity for your intended market. If your produce will be consumed shortly after harvest, why harvest it early?

Let the crop stay in the field until it reaches peak eating quality and then harvest. In that way your fruit will be sweeter and your vegetables will taste better as well. If your crop will be shipped, leaving it in the field until it is very mature will result in overmature produce at the point of sale.

For shipping produce, you need to harvest the crop before you would for immediate consumption and thus some potential quality is lost. However, this produce has to be able to stand-up to the rigors of transport and still be in good condition when it reaches the consumer.

But why do so many growers harvest fruit that will be consumed rapidly and transported very short distances like it will stored for long periods of time? I've seen lots of "green" produce on the market, especially fruit.

Ridge Administration Awards Grants For Youth

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — On behalf of Gov. Tom Ridge, Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr. announced that 24 youth organizations have been selected to receive a total of $57,551 through the Agricultural and Rural Youth Organization Grant Program.

"Gov. Ridge and I are pleased to present these grants which support our agricultural youth and help to ensure that Pennsylvania's strong agricultural tradition is continued for generations to come," Hayes said. "The Agricultural and Rural Youth Grant Board chose the winning projects from 64 submitted applications based on how each would impact the greatest number of youth and best utilize existing or volunteer resources."

The program, started in 1991, allows agriculture youth organizations to apply for direct grants up to $2,500 to fund educational projects, programs and seminars. This year's grants will fund programs ranging from 4-H camps and educational trips, to a county food-safety program.

Grant recipients were selected by a board comprised of representatives from the departments of Agriculture and Education; the Pennsylvania Rural Electric Association; 4-H; FFA; vocational agriculture teachers; Penn State Cooperative Extension; Pennsylvania State Grange; Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives Representatives; and members of the state General Assembly.

Following are recipients of this year's grants, listed by county:

- Beaver: Blackhawk FFA, Beaver Falls, $2,213 to provide equipment for the production of redworms to process organic waste.
- Berks: Kutztown High School FFA, Kutztown, $2,495 to provide an environmental learning lab related to wildlife habitat, water quality and soil conservation for students in elementary, junior and senior high schools.
- Bucks: Warminster 4-H Club, Doylestown, $2,500 to provide a field, barn and pasture for a gardening and livestock program for suburban youth.
- Cambria: Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives (PCC), Patton, $2,500 to provide for PCC's 1998 four-day summer youth institute at Shippensburg University.
- Centre: State College Little Lions FFA, State College, $2,250 to provide a mobile resource center for food and fiber education along with pilot Ag Science Academics one-day camps.
- Columbia: Columbia-Montour A.V.T.S., Bloomsburg, $2,500 to provide a "Horticulture, a Growing Experience" program for third and fourth graders.
- Cumberland: 4-H Development Fund, Carlisle, $2,500 to provide a three-day Agricultural Science Camp; and Shippensburg High School FFA, $2,500 to provide a workshop/instruction program to properly train individuals to enter and excel in the commercial and dairy farm business.
- Delaware: 4-H, Springfield, $2,500 to provide an Ag in the Classroom project.
- Franklin: 4-H Development Fund Committee, Chambersburg, $2,500 to develop an Ag Learning Center.

SAFETY Live with it

LEADERSHIP AT WORK®

Let's do a better job of timing our harvests so that the consumer experiences the true potential of our crops! Another simple way to maintain produce quality has to do with temperature control. High temperatures are destructive to any freshly harvested crop but especially to vegetables.

Ideally you should harvest your vegetables early in the morning while the temperatures of both the air and the vegetables are the lowest. The vegetables should then be moved out of the field and into a cool location as soon as possible to prevent the build-up of heat from both the rising air temperatures and exposure to sunlight. This simple step can result in a remarkable increase in the quality of your produce.

If you sell at the auction be sure to cover your produce to protect it from the heat of the sun while you sit in line. If you intend to store your crop for any length of time then you should plan on cooling it as quickly as possible, especially for produce harvested in the heat of summer. The use of water for cooling is the most rapid but few people can afford the expense of this type of cooling system. If you put your produce in a cooler or a cool cellar use the smallest boxes possible and be sure to leave some space between the boxes so that air can flow between them.

This will result in the most rapid cooling possible, especially if there is some air movement by fans. Always be sure to start with the coolest produce possible which means harvesting as early as possible in the day.

Finally, be sure to handle your produce appropriately. While apples and pumpkins can take rougher handling than peaches and zucchini, this doesn't mean that you should handle them rougher! Be sure not to drop any produce item into a box or bin during harvest and avoid sudden jarring motions like dropping boxes or hitting a large pothole in the field.

By treating your produce like the perishible item it is you will preserve the greatest amount of the quality you've tried hard to put into that produce during the growing season.

I would like each grower to examine their production system this year to see what can be improved in order to have higher quality produce at the point of sale. Even if you only focus on one area you can still experience some improvement. And don't be surprised if I ask you what you do to preserve quality if I'm at your farm or we meet at some other location!

Highland Cattle Sale April 18

BATH, N.Y. — Over the years, Lancaster Farming Magazine has had a number of articles about Scotch Highland cattle. If you have ever wanted to see or learn more about Highland cattle, your best opportunity is now closer to your back door than ever.

Some of the breeders of Highlanders of the Southern Tier of New York State, Pennsylvania, and possibly Rhode Island are going to have a sale on April 18.

The sale will be held at the Empire Livestock Barns in Bath, N.Y. The farms that have consigned animals represent a wide range of methods of raising Highlanders.

There will be farms that raise "show cattle," farms that are raising beef that is praised for being the lowest in fat and cholesterol, and there are also farms consigning animals that started raising Highlanders simply for the purpose of chewing down a field that has started to grow up with brush.

If you have ever wanted to know more about these Highland beasts with their shaggy hair and long horns, this will be a chance for you to talk with many different breeders without having to travel all over the country to do it. If you have ever considered buying a few Highlanders, this is a good opportunity for you to look at a good number of animals with different bloodlines.

You will also be able to see the difference between Highlanders raised with no grain, just foraging on what the pastures or hay for the winter provide as compared to the grain-fed show cattle.

The farmers that have consigned animals are always happy to answer any questions you may want to ask. Highlander beef will be served at the sale. The meat will also be offered for sale.

For more information about the farms that are consigning animals and what there is for sale, contact Jess Brown or Kevin MacCrea. Their addresses are: Jess Brown, Unique Acres, 8402 N. Otto Rd., Cattaraugus, NY 14719, (716) 257-3573 or Locustbrae Farm, Kevin MacCrea, 1664 Water Wells Rd., Alfred Station, NY 14803, (607) 587-9270.

"ATTENTION DAIRYMEN"

Sprung Farms of Bergen, NY and J. Elvin Glick of Quarryville, PA have been supplying area dairymen with high quality forages for years, so we would like to introduce a new type of service, "Alfalfa Balage" "Alfalfa Balage" has been around for a time now and has proven to make a great source of feed providing that the farmer gets what he pays for To help resolve this problem we would like to introduce an "on your farm service" which would include fresh baled alfalfa in easy to use 4' or 5' round bales. 1. Delivered immediately after baling, unwrapped for total inspection of quality and pureness of product, 2 After total satisfaction has been determined, a wrapping service by one of our local area farmers would take place at any site desired by buyer, 3. We can also offer two kinds of wrapping service, either single bale, individually or tube type by state of the art new wrappers.

Because we are so sure that our product and service is second to none, we can also offer a term type payment schedule with no interest to help spread out puchase to help with cash flow. If this offer interests you please call us to talk more about this and possibly we can arrange a personal meeting.

We also still carry our full line of small square bales of hay:

1. Alfalfa
2. Timothy/Alfalfa
3. Bedding
4. Western Hay

We also have single bale individually wrapped balage available. Any size load is available.
